Labor Dept. Head Takes 2 Quick Steps In GSI Strike

Legal Opinion Asked On Bargaining Status Of Employer; Talk With Fleming Set

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach took two quick steps yesterday in response to President Truman's request that he act to settle the GSI cafeteria dispute.

1. He asked Labor Department attorneys to rule whether the Taft-Hartley Act prevents Government Services, Inc., from bargaining with the union because of the union's failure to file non-Communist affidavits.

2. He plans to talk today to Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming—the Government's representative in the contract with GSI for operation of most of the 42 Federal building cafeterias.

The White House yesterday confirmed a story in The Washington Post that the President had asked Schwellenbach Tuesday night to do what he could to settle the 17-day-old strike.

Union Officials Rejoice

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said the President had "asked Schwellenbach to investigate the whole situation" and the two had spoken again on the telephone about it yesterday morning.

Officials of Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO) rejoiced at President Truman's request and Schwellenbach's first moves.

"At last," said business agent Oliver T. Palmer, "the President has seen fit to step into a situation that has become a national disgrace. GSI—which uses Government property and equipment—has been embarrassing the Administration."

GSI officials had no positive comment.

"Now that it's in the hands of the Government," said J. C. Niehuss, personnel manager, "we feel we needn't say anything. Our case is well-known; we believe our position is legally and morally correct."

Questions Involved

Last November 28, a month before expiration of the labor contract, GSI met a union demand for a 15-cent hourly increase with the statement that it would not bargain until the union filed the non-Communist affidavits and financial statements. These documents are required by the Taft-Hartley Act before a union may receive the services of the National Labor Relations Board. Subsequently GSI put 6½ cents an hour increases into effect.

What Schwellenbach wants to know from Labor Department solicitor William S. Tyson is primarily:

Does the Taft-Hartley Act mean that in such a labor dispute the

GOP to Act On Spending Before Taxes

Budget Committee Meets as Party's Steering Groups Review Major Bills

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House and Senate Republican leaders yesterday decided to throw a quick ceiling over spending to clear the way for tax cuts.

Details of the spending limit were left to a 102-man joint congressional committee on the legislative budget, holding its first meeting today.

A net slash of three billion dollars in the President's 39.7-billion budget is the minimum goal, but leaders failed to agree definitely on a figure.

In the first full-dress Republican program conference of the session, House and Senate GOP steering committees "reviewed" 20 other major pieces of legislation, but deferred decisions on all.

Martin States Plans

Speaker Joseph W. Martin (R., Mass.) voiced "hope" that legislative budget ceilings will be set before the House passes the Knutson general tax reduction bill around February 2, but said the House will proceed to cut taxes in any event.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who led his own Senate steering group to Martin's office, said his group will defer any conclusions on tax cuts until after the House acts.

The House Ways and Means Committee, proceeding with the Knutson bill under Republican leadership orders, meanwhile heard it might cost 6.5 billion dollars instead of 5.6 billion.

Colin F. Stam, staff chief of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, estimated Knutson bill tax cuts will reach the higher figure if personal income runs to 209 billion dollars in 1948.

3.5 Billion Surplus Seen

President Truman based his budget on a 192-to-200-billion-dollar National income. Assuming this was an underestimate, Stam calculated Congress could cut the budget three billion dollars, apply Knutson bill tax cuts, and still have a 3.5-billion-dollar surplus left over if personal income continues to soar.

Stam's estimates on Treasury receipts were in excess of the President's all along the line, and the resulting surplus correspondingly higher. Apparently this clinched the GOP decision to stand pat on the Knutson bill.

Mr. Truman figured revenues on present taxes at 44.5 billion in the next fiscal year. Stam said that with 200 billions in personal income current taxes should yield 45.6 billion. If personal income climbs to 209 billion, he figured the revenue yield would be 47.3 billion dollars, nearly three billions in excess of the President's revenue estimate.

Starts Reading of Bill

The congressional tax expert submitted to the Ways and Means committee 30 pages of income tax data, with separate tables showing the effect of the Knutson bill on the budget at varying spending ceilings. The same tables are expected to figure in today's two-House conference on the legislative budget.

The Ways and Means Committee barely got started reading the 28-page Knutson bill before it quit until Friday. A little band of Democrats was still battling for the President's "no net loss" of revenue plan, but committee ap-

Hoover Urges Congress to Cut Marshall Plan Cost and Scope

Secretaries Marshall, Royall Deny Dulles' Charge Against AMG

But Administration Is Given Support of Veterans' Groups

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

President Truman's State and Army Secretaries denied yesterday John Foster Dulles' assertion that Army occupation authorities in Germany are not effectively cooperating in the European recovery program.

Dulles, Republican adviser on foreign affairs, expressed his opinion to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, yesterday while testifying in support of the Marshall Plan for aid to Europe. He recommended that the State Department take over from the Army the administration of the occupation zone.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), the committee chairman, remarked there was nothing Congress could do except petition the President.

Today, Secretary of State Marshall told a news conference the Army Department here is keenly aware of the program and highly cooperative.

Secretary of the Army Royall issued a statement saying Dulles was "pitifully uninformed," he added:

"The truth is that the department of the Army and its European commander are unqualifiedly sup-

Herbert Hoover cautioned Congress yesterday not to approve the Marshall Plan without cutting its cost, limiting its scope and changing its proposed method of administration.

The former President's reservations, embodied in a 5000-word letter from New York to Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg, will be inserted in the record of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today.

The Senate committee heard strong support of the Marshall Plan yesterday from leaders of all the major veterans' associations, while the House Foreign Affairs Committee spent the day questioning Secretaries Snyder and Harriman on financial and supply aspects of the program.

Hoover said in his letter that the United States should help Europe "to the full extent which does not weaken our own economy and thus defeat all world recovery." He conceded that the American people would always want to prevent hunger and cold; that it was vital to stimu-

200,000 Strike Over Food in West Zones Of Germany

U. S. and British Forces Prepared To Keep Order; Ban Red Congress

Berlin, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Two hundred thousand workers walked out in the American and British occupation zones today and Allied authorities were reported prepared to use military force if necessary to maintain order during widespread general strikes threatened this weekend.

The British military government, believing that Communists are active in fomenting strikes, banned the Communist-sponsored "People's Congress" as a precaution.

German political quarters reported that members of a Communist "resistance movement," organized under the recently disclosed Protocol M plot to sabotage the Marshall Plan, were awaiting orders to take a more open part in strikes.

All Strikes Over Food

Approximately 70,000 men started a half-day strike at lunch time in Nuernberg, in the American zone.

In Cologne, in the British zone on the fringe of the Ruhr, approximately 100,000 struck this morning for 24 hours.

Smaller strikes in Wiesbaden, in the American zone; Essen, in the British zone and other cities brought the total number of strikers to about 200,000.

All the strikes were called in protest against the admittedly irking food shortage. But in Allied minds was the open declaration of Russia that she is all out to smash the Marshall Plan.

An official of the American Military Government predicted "demonstration" strikes throughout Bavaria this weekend, involving anywhere up to that state's total of 650,000 union members.

Economic Council Meets

The German Bizonal Economic Council met today at Frankfurt, American headquarters, to discuss the food situation. But little hope was held that such bodies can do anything at the moment. Allied authorities demand that the Germans themselves solve their food problem by compelling farmers to deliver food instead of hoarding it and by distributing such food as is available fairly between large city areas and smaller towns. The Germans demand that the Allies bring in more food from abroad.

Both the Nuernberg and Cologne strikes—like all called so far—were completely orderly. There were some picket lines in Cologne.

It was understood that British agents are hunting down known trouble-makers on their "wanted" list and are watching for any sign that the banned "People's Congress" is reorganizing underground.

3 'Incidents' Related in Murphy Trial

Fire Chief Said To Have Had Men Redecorate Home

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Three alleged incidents not included in present "demoralization" charges against Fire Chief Clement Murphy were heard at his trial yesterday.

As Murphy strongly denied that he was drunk on two occasions, as charged in nine counts against him, the new allegations went into the record as collateral testimony.

They do not constitute new charges against the Fire Chief, and cannot be considered as such by the civilian board. The allegations are:

Absence Unmarked

1. That Murphy, to demonstrate "command of his men," according to District Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent, ordered Fire Marshall Raymond C. Roberts to leave his table at a Mayflower Hotel cocktail party in September, 1946. (Murphy denied this.)

2. That Sergt. Curtis Varah, Murphy's aide at the time, was not marked absent in 1945 records when he was on a vacation in Nebraska. (Varah testified the vacation was taken on annual leave and compensatory time owed him).

3. That Varah and other firemen redecorated part of the interior and exterior of Murphy's house in June, 1945. (Varah stated this was done on two days of his annual leave and "a couple of half-days.")

Maher Wins Ruling

The vacation and decorating incients were originally included in the charges against him, but were stricken two weeks ago when the board ruled that charges would be limited to the time Murphy took office as chief, on March 1, 1946.

Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher yesterday won a ruling that they could be introduced only as an attempt to show that Varah was biased. He was one of several witnesses who testified that Murphy was not drunk.

Introduction of the cocktail party incident came as Maher attempted to prove that Murphy was intoxicated and used abusive lan-

1500 Attend Rites For Archbishop At St. Matthew's

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

In a ceremony rich in ancient pageantry, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, D.D., yesterday was installed as Archbishop of the new Archdiocese of Washington—spiritual shepherd of 165,000 Catholics here and in five nearby Maryland counties.

Archbishop O'Boyle, a vigorous prelate of 51, was handed a golden crozier, symbol of his pastoral authority, as he sat on a throne in the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle.

Fifteen hundred persons witnessed the solemn rites and knelt to receive Archbishop O'Boyle's blessing. They included, besides 19 archbishops and bishops and 60 monsignori, high-ranking officials of the Government, diplomats, and such notables as former Postmaster General James A. Farley and George McDonald of New York City, a papal marquis, resplendent in red, black and gold. Representing President Truman was Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Frank Murphy.

Distinction for Capital

"Washington," said the Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, "today deservedly receives its own Shepherd . . . We welcome him with joy, reverence and love."

Thus the Holy See gave to the capital of the United States a distinction long enjoyed by London, Paris, Berlin, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro and other major capitals which have archbishops or cardinal-archbishops.

And thus, too, was fulfilled the vision of an American prelate who administered the Archdiocese of Baltimore nearly a century ago.

The Apostolic Delegatee, who presided at the installation, told the little-known story about Archbishop Francis Patrick Kenrick and what he wrote down in Latin in 1851:

Recalls Early History

"The thought comes to me of erecting a new Episcopal See in the City of Washington, so as not to leave the seat of (Federal) Government without due prominence."

Archbishop Cicognani recalled, too, how the first Catholics to come to English-speaking North America landed on the banks of the Potomac in that part of Maryland now embraced in the Archdiocese of Washington. These were the

Parents Face Court Action in School Strike

Officials to Enter Truancy Charges, Subject to Jail, Fine

School officials said yesterday that they will take to court parents who are withholding their children from classes in the Blow and Webb annexes to the Negro Browne Junior High School.

They also said children who have missed time as a result of the strike must make up the work before being promoted.

Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning told the Board of Education that truant officers are now making their final visits to parents in an effort to persuade them to return children to school.

"We are proceding just as we ordinarily do in any case in which a parent refuses to send his child to school," Corning said.

He indicated that legal proceedings are the next step.

The District School Attendance Law states that a parent who fails to send his child to school is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction is subject to a $10 fine or five days in jail or both for each offense. Each two-day absence or four half-day absence is considered a separate offense.

Parents took their children out of classes when Blow and Webb, former white elementary buildings, were transferred to use by the Negro children. Parents are demanding that the board find "adequate junior high facilities" for their children.

The board's committee on buildings and grounds agreed at yesterday's meeting to a conference at 12:30 p. m. today with Belford V. Lawson, jr., attorney for the Browne Parent-Teacher Association.

Lawson requested the conference stating that he wished to amicably settle the Browne situation "with-

Boy Fatally Hurt While Coasting Near Libertytown

Frederick, Md., Jan. 21 (Spl.).—An 11-year-old boy was fatally injured today when his sled ran into the side of an automobile on Route 31, about 2 miles east of Libertytown.

Maryland State Police said the lad was Eugene Bodmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bodmer of Union Bridge and a grandson of Capt. Roy Bodmer of the Prince Georges County police force. He died at Frederick Memorial Hospital around noon, about two hours after the accident.

Trooper Lauren Ridge, who investigated the accident, said the boy apparently coasted from a partially concealed driveway onto the highway and into the side of an auto driven by the Rev. Earle Lee Hayer of Rolston, Va. He was taken to the hospital in the minister's auto.

No charges have been placed against the Rev. Mr. Hayer, police said.

U. S. Target Of Russian On Lenin Day

Communist Party Propaganda Chief Unleashes Blast

Moscow, Jan. 21 (NYHT).—The United States was denounced in a fiery speech delivered tonight by Mikhail A. Suslov, propaganda chief of the Communist Party, at a memorial service observing the twenty-fourth anniversary of the death of Lenin, founder of the Soviet state.

Suslov spoke in the presence of Prime Minister Stalin and other top Soviet leaders who assembled at the Bolshoi Theater.

Directing his inflammatory words gainst "American imperialists and their junior English partners," the new head of the Communist Party's propaganda and agitation administration accused them of "trying desperately hard to take the place of Fascist Germany and Japan and provoke a new war."

Suslov used Lenin's writings against American "bankers, monopolists and industrialists." He said they are "practicing armed intervention in Greece, China and Indonesia and exerting economic and political blackmail everywhere under the flag of anti-communism."

He referred to the fate of Nazi Germany as something Americans should bear in mind.

The Marshall Plan was referred to as "enslaving aid."

U. S. Publishes Documents on Nazi-Red Pact

Molotov Congratulated Hitler on Successes, Secret Papers Reveal

Skeletons in the Soviet closet were bared by the State Department yesterday in the form of 260 hitherto-secret documents, captured from German archives, on Nazi-Soviet relations.

The documents tell the story, from the German side, of the partnership that was sealed by the Nazi-Soviet nonaggression pact of August, 1939, and broken at dawn on June 22, 1941, with the Nazi attack on Russia.

They show that during this period Russia gave material and moral support to the German war machine, even to the extent that Foreign Minister Molotov wished "complete success" to the German onslaught upon Norway and Denmark in the spring of 1940.

And when Germany had conquered France and neutral Holland and Belgium, Molotov expressed his government's "warmest congratulation" to the Germans on the "splendid success of the German armed forces."

The documents also include disparaging comments on Great Britain, France and Turkey from Prime Minister Stalin. In August, 1939, Stalin told the Nazis that if England dominated the world "this was due to the stupidity of other

Laughlin Parades Witnesses To Strengthen Alibi Defense

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Mrs. Esther Pickard Hobbs once declared that the "district attorney" was "mad" at Attorney James J. Laughlin and was using her to get even, an acquaintance of Mrs. Hobbs testified in District Court yesterday.

Laughlin and Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., are codefendants charged with complicity in illegal operations performed on Mrs. Hobbs "on or about" last March 20 and 22.

The witnesses, Mrs. W. Jenkins White of Raleigh, N. C., asserted that she spoke to Mrs. Hobbs early this month in Raleigh and that the latter said "she was turning State's evidence because the District Attorney was mad at Mr. Laughlin and was using her to get even with him."

George Morris Fay, United States attorney for the District, told The Washington Post later he had "no comment."

Mrs. White, under cross-examination by Prosecutor Arthur McLaughlin, said she came up from Raleigh last Saturday in the same plane with another defense witness and associate of Laughlin's, Charles Flasphaler.

She did not sit with the latter, she said, but shared space with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Sought Him in China, Hoping to the End

Death Ends Mother's Search for Flier Son

By Charles Yarbrough
Post Reporter

A Washington mother's unwavering faith that her only son was still alive died with her yesterday in China, where she had gone to seek him.

Mrs. Hazel Moore of the Washington Club, 1710 K st. nw., died in a French hospital at Peiping after a nervous breakdown, doctors said.

Friends said the cause was a broken heart. They said she was confident until the end that her son, Capt. Harley Moore, 26, of Syracuse, N. Y., had survived a transport plane crash in Communist-held China last October.

Anxiety added years to the slight, grey-haired mother in her final weeks, doctors said. She was admitted to the hospital 20 days ago and lapsed into unconsciousness shortly before he death.

Captain Moore's China Air Transport Corp. cargo plane went down October 17 near Shihkiachwang in Central China. Search planes were fired on.

Later, a message from the Communist Area Relief Agency said the aircraft crashed, burned and the bodies had been buried by Communist militia. An UNRRA relief team brought bodies of three of the crash victims into Tientsin, Christmas Day.

Mrs. Moore's hopes soared when her son's body was not among the three, even in the face of a U. S. Consulate's report that an investigator had confirmed Captain Moore's death.

MRS. HAZEL MOORE — CAPT. HARLEY MOORE — MRS. HARLEY MOORE

Mrs. Moore left Washington in October and joined Captain Moore's wife and two children in China. Her last letter to a brother, Dr. Harley Black of Syracuse, dated December 26, reiterated her faith that her son was still alive.

The next information about Mrs. Moore was a State Department suggestion that relatives urge her to return home.

Efforts are under way to return her body to the United States for burial, probably in Syracuse, relatives said.

Fifty-four at her death, she had been identified with the American Red Cross since World War I and had worked in several of its greatest disaster calls, including the 1936 tornado at Tupelo, Miss., and the Ohio-Mississippi river flood of 1937.

She served as executive secretary in the Johnstown, Pa.; Charlotte, N. C., and Raleigh, N. C. chapters, and while in Raleigh helped organize the Raleigh YWCA.

Mrs. Moore also helped organize the World Women's Party in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1937, and attended the International Conference for Women in Mexico City in 1939.

Tito Sees War Soon, Paper Says

'Question of Weeks,' He Is Quoted as Saying; Claims Weapon Deadlier Than Atom Bomb

Paris, Jan. 21 (AP).—The Italian newspaper La Voce in Trieste published today a purported speech by Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia in which he was quoted as saying war with Britain and the United States was perhaps "a question of several weeks" and that Yugoslavia had a weapon more destructive than the atomic bomb.

Pierre G. S. Dumas, assistant editor of the pro-deGaulle newspaper, Dissidence 40, which published the same purported speech on December 15, said today, however, that he was convinced the report was a fabrication.

Dumas said the story was first printed in Vaterland at Lucerne, Switzerland, on November 19, the day after Tito was supposed to have made the speech at Zagreb, and was reprinted by Dissidence 40 in good faith. Since then, he added, he had received reports from Balkan correspondents which convinced him despite his anti-Communist feelings, that the alleged speech was never made.

Dissidence 40's text quoted Tito as telling a secret gathering of the Yugoslav Communist Party executive that it was necessary to "decide all indispensable questions which will permit the definite annihilation of the reaction" and that time was short.

The published text said he threatened to "surprise the reaction" and contained these other quotations:

"We have a very strong army, well organized, that we don't nourish with chocolate and cake" and which is ready to "chase the divisions of the gangsters who are concentrated in Italy and Austria."

"We are ready to sink their fleet in the Adriatic."

"To their atomic bombs we will reply with ours."

"Our soldiers are equipped with the most modern arms and material whose destructive force is superior to that of the atomic bomb."

"We are receiving our material from inexhaustible sources, and our communication lines will never be cut."

"The Russian arsenals are producing 30,000 tanks monthly."

"Russian general headquarters disposes of 150 divisions which can be on the march in 48 hours and destroy all obstacles on its route and reach Paris."

"War against the Anglo-Americans is inevitable. It is perhaps even a question of several weeks."

He was quoted as saying there remained "several thousands of bandits in the mountains" but "they do not annoy us as much as the hundreds of thousands like them who live among us, spy on us, and inform London and Washington by unknown means."

25 Escape As Plane Burns Upon Landing

Boston, Jan. 21 (AP).—Twenty-five persons jumped to safety in a snowbank today to escape flames sweeping through a big Eastern Airlines passenger plane. Fire broke out as the big Constellation nosed into the snow in a landing skid.

Fourteen passengers were injured, eight of them hospitalized, in leaps from the tilted and burning plane.

Capt. Merrill E. Thayer of Miami, pilot of the Newark-bound flight from Miami, which was rerouted to Boston because of bad weather, said the 20 passengers "weren't a bit flustered."

"They just stood there by the door waiting for someone to tell them what to do," Thayer said.

Chesapeake Bay Authority Bill Gets Md. Backing

Baltimore, Jan. 21 (AP).—Attorney General Hall Hammond will go to Richmond for a conference tomorrow with Harvey B. Apperson, Attorney General of Virginia, on a bill to be introduced in the Virginia General Assembly which would set up a bi-State Chesapeake Bay authority.

Hammond will be accompanied by F. W. C. Webb and Robert H. Archer, two of the Maryland members of the Inter-State Study Commission on Fish and Shellfish in the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River.

The commission recently recommended a bay authority, composed of representatives from each State, to regulate fin-fishing and crabbing in the Chesapeake and its tributaries.

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland has given the proposal his full indorsement. There have been some objections voiced by Virginia authorities.

Greeks Kill Five Rebels, Arrest 60

Athens, Greece, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—The government was reported to have executed five persons and arrested 60 others today in its drive to stamp out subversive elements.

Dispatches from Salonika said that three allegede leftists, including one woman, wer eput to death there following their conviction by court martial.

Reports from Patras said two guerilla leaders were executed on the island of Cefalonia on a charge of conducting the mass execution of 42 Greek police in 1943.

Sixty persons were arrested at Larissa in the discovery of an alleged conspiracy which involved the forcible enlistment of recruits for the rebel forces of Gen. Markos Vafiades.

Meanwhile, three small villages in the Larissa area were reported attacked by some 400 guerillas who were said to have been repulsed with casualties.

Artillery exchanges were reported continuing in the Konitsa sector.

Socialist Hits Aid to Europe, But Not Italy

Rome, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Left-wing Socialist leader Pietro Nenni today attacked the Truman Doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey, the Marshall Plan of aid to Europe, and then declared that Italy needs help and it is America's duty to help her.

"All this talk about help from America makes it necessary that we tell America, after all, that it is her duty to send aid," Nenni said in a three-hour address at the Socialist Party's national convention.

"Britain and Soviet Russia are certainly not in any position to help anybody after the great damage and sacrifices they suffered during the war," Nenni added to the warm applause from the 1000 delegates.

Nenni claimed his party is neutral in international affairs.

He said he favored a policy of friendship with the United States and Britain and collaboration with the East, "but on condition there be no imposition on Italy that U. S. policy or Russian policy must become Italian policy."

Nenni declared full Socialist solidarity with the Communist Party and denounced the government "as a federation of priests led by the Bishop of Rome." His support of a pro-communist policy indicates the "unity of action" pact will be renewed.

Public Aid Asked On Oil Pollution

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 21 (AP).—The Maryland Commission on Water Pollution Control wants the public to cooperate in reducing oil pollution in the Chesapeake Bay.

Posters are being distributed by commission experts to watermen and yacht clubs to get the public's help in catching up with those who dump oil and bilge into the bay.

The posters ask persons to take the name of any vessel seen pumping out bilge or oil.

A Federal as well as a State law prohibits the discharge of oil or bilge into coastal navigable waters.

English colonists who, under the protection of Lord Baltimore, came over in the Ark and the Dove and found a sanctuary in the New World in 1634.

Archbishop O'Boyle likewise dwelt on this heritage and paid tribute to those who had preceded him—Archbishop John Carroll, who bas born in Upper Marlboro, Prince Georges County, Md., in 1735; James Cardinal Gibbons and the late Archbishop Michael J. Curley, all of whom administered the Archdiocese of Baltimore when it included Washington.

"It is, therefore, to a high and ancient lineage that we succeed," he said.

Before starting his address, Archbishop O'Boyle announced that the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, titular bishop of Eumenia, would be his vicar general. Bishop McNamara held this same post under the late Archbishop Curley. Upon Archbishop Curley's death, the office ceased and Bishop McNamara became administrator of the Washington Archdiocese.

Archbishop O'Boyle, speaking in a resonant voice, said that John Carroll, his early predecessor, had by his life and writings borne witness to "the marvelous harmony that exists between the Constitution of the United States and the teachings of the Catholic Church."

"America's most distinctive contribution," he said, "has been the establishment and preservation of a society of free men who have received equal justice under law.

"The founding fathers clearly recognized the existence of God, and the existence in man, made to the image of his Maker, of those inalienable rights which experience shows are never long respected where the independence of religion is denied.

"They saw quite clearly that the state exists for the people, not the people for the state. More clearly than many who quote them today they saw why that is true. If a man be not a spiritual being with a destiny higher than mere temporal existence, there is no reason to limit thus the powers of the state.

"Nor will those limits long be respected if we do not keep before us the Divine precept: 'Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's.'"

The installation ceremony fell on the feast of St. Agnes, Virgin and Martyr, and so the altar at St. Matthews was decorated with red gladioli and Archbishop O'Boyle was arrayed in a red stole, symbol of his priestly authority, and a red cope.

On his head he wore a towering bishop's mitre of white, studded with jewels.

He took "canonical possession of the Archdiocese of Washington"—this city and the Maryland counties of Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys—at that moment in the ritual when the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John K. Cartwright, the notary, read the papal documents and decrees, first in Latin and then in English.

These had been handed to Msgr. Cartwright by the Apostolic Delegate.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. Russell, assistant priest at the installation, then went to the altar and sang a brief versicle, with response by priests.

This prayer was recited:

"O, God, the Shepherd and Ruler of all the faithful, look with favor on Thy servant, Patrick, whom Thou hast been pleased to place over Thy Church; and grant him, we beseech Thee, so to help his flock by word and example that he may come to eternal life along with that flock which Thou has committed to his care. Through Christ Our Lord, Amen."

The choir sang the Gregorian antiphon and versicle of St. Matthew, patron saint of the cathedral, as Archbishop O'Boyle ascended the altar to sing a prayer in St. Matthew's honor.

Descending to the foot of the altar, Archbishop O'Boyle was met by the Apostolic Delegate and Monsignor Russell, who escorted him to his throne.

The Apostolic Delegate at this point handed Archbishop O'Boyle his crozier or crooked staff, symbol of his authority. While a cross bearer knelt in the center of the sanctuary, the archbishop gave his blessing.

As the Apostolic Delegate intoned the hymn of thanksgiving, Te Deum Laudamus, representatives of the clergy approached the throne to kiss the ring of Archbishop O'Boyle, thus pledging their obedience. Monsignor Carthwright, rector of St. Matthews, not only kissed the episcopal ring but embraced his new superior.

Bishop McNamara, ascending the pulpit to welcome the new Archbishop, recalled his work as director of Catholic charities in New York and said that he had been "an almoner to God's poor."

"You come to us a stranger," Bishop McNamara continued, "but your coming offers no challenge to loyalties that are rooted in Divine faith and love for the Church of Christ. When we look at you, we see Pius from whom you come and, in Pius, we see him to whom it was said: 'Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build My Church.' May you have health and strength and length of days . . ."

Archbishop Cicognani, speaking from the sanctuary, sketched the Catholic background of the Washington area and observed that "everything was ripe indeed" for it to become a diocese and have its own bishop.

He pointed out that Washington had developed into a great ecclesiastical center requiring its own diocesan organization and bishop; that the Catholic population had grown, with parishes and schools and institutions always increasing; that there had sprung up a large number of priests and religious houses, and the city also had the distinction of having two large universities, Georgetown and Catholic University.

Archbishop O'Boyle, responding to the welcome, praised the American habit of cooperation in community enterprises and promised "wholehearted support . . . in every genuine endeavor to promote the common good."

He recalled that Father Andrew White, the Jesuit who came over with Lord Baltimore's colonists, dedicated the Maryland colony to the patronage of Mary, Mother of God. Concluding, he said:

"May our Blessed Lady, national patroness of the United States and patroness in a special way of the Church in these ancient counties, obtain for us from her Divine Son the grace to perservere in the best of causes, to know, to love and to stand fast in the Faith."

The procession with which yesterday's ceermony began was headed by an honor guard of fourth degree Knights of Columbus, led by William H. Collins. Then came 250 priests, some in the habits of Dominicans and Franciscans, and after them the 60 monsignori and the purple-robed members of the hierarchy.

George McDonald, the paper marquis, walked just ahead of Archbishop O'Boyle and the Apostolic Delegate and their ministers.

By the time the ceremony ended, following a pontifical mass, the sun broke through a cloud layer and added brightness to the outgoing procession.

Parish Delegates To Welcome O'Boyle

Representatives from the 82 parishes in the archdiocese of Washington and from all Catholic lay organizations, will extend a welcome to the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle in the gymnasium of the Catholic University of America, tonight, at 8:15 o'clock.

Most Rev. John M. McNamara, titular Bishop of Eumania, and former administrator of the Baltimore and Washington archdiocese, will preside. The program includes greetings on behalf of the men of the archdiocese by John A. Reilly, president of the Board of Trade, and on behalf of Catholic women by Mrs. Joseph Egan, president of the Sodality Union of Washington. The Catholic University Men's Glee Club will sing.

Britain Plans Scrapping of Old Warships

London, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—The Admiralty announced today that it will scrap four battleships, eight cruisers and a number of smaller ships and thereby reduce British naval strength by almost a quarter million tons.

Lord Hall, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Lords the government has decided to scrap the Queen Elizabeth, 32,700 tons; the Valiant, 31,520 tons; the Nelson, 33,950 tons, and the Rodney, 33,900 tons—all battleships; the battle cruiser Renown, 30,750 tons, seven other cruisers and several smaller vessels.

He said the Admiralty believed the ships had "the least value as fighting ships," and felt maintaining them in reserve would be too costly.

"We shall retain the battleships which we consider to have a fine fighting value," Hall said, "but we are satisfied these reductions do not reduce the navy's effective strength below that necessary to meet any emergency likely to arise in the foreseeable future."

Scrapping would leave Britain only five battleships. These are the 42,500-ton Vanguard, completed in 1946; the King George V, the Duke of York, the Anson and the Howe, all 35,000 tons, and all completed during the war.

FEC Told of Plan To Make Nation Self-Supporting

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The United States yesterday notified the Far Eastern Commission it was about to take steps to make Japan "self-supporting at the earliest possible time."

Today the Administration will ask Congress for funds not only to feed the Japanese but to provide in fiscal 1949 for raw materials and spare parts to start them on the road to economic independence. Yesterday's announcement, placed before the 11-nation FEC by Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy, American member, was designed to prepare the commission for this request.

[The New York Herald Tribune said last night that the Army Department will ask for a special Japanese recovery fund of about 150 million dollars in addition to about 225 million dollars for civilian feeding and health.—Editor's Note.]

"The United States Government," McCoy said, "recognizing that the cooperation of the Far Eastern Commission and its member states is essential to the successful accomplishment of a program for bringing about a self-supporting economy in Japan, requests favorable consideration of future policies to be presented to the commission toward this end."

Japan's Progress Cited

McCoy pointed out the "exceptional" progress the Japanese people have made since VJ-Day toward self-government and acceptance of a peaceful national policy. He recalled also that Japan's ability to make war "on the land, on the sea, and in the air" had been destroyed.

"However," he added, "the establishment of a self-supporting economy in Japan without which the achievement of the occupation cannot be consolidated has not yet been accomplished. Japanese industry and commerce are not yet sufficient to sustain the Japanese economy; there is not yet final Allied determination of reparations which Japan will be required to pay; and Japan is not yet in a position to participate fully in world trade and to contribute its part to the rehabilitation of world economy.

"Economic chaos in Japan has been prevented only at the expense of the American people who have financed the importation of vital food and other materials required to prevent widespread disorder and unrest."

United States contributions to Japanese economy, limited largely to the bare necessities of life, currently average some 350 million dollars a year.

This Nation has lent the Japanese a quantity of cotton to return some of their textile mills to production. In addition, it shares in the FEC revolving fund of more than 137 million dollars to aid Japan in importing raw materials.

The FEC has agreed upon an economic level for Japan as of 1930-34 and has concurred in some other minor measures respecting that country's economy.

Reparations Blocks Accord

So closely are reparations linked with revival of Japanese industry, however, that no agreement has yet been reached on fixing levels of production in various industries upon which Japanese economic recovery depends. While munitions plants obviously in excess of peacetime needs would be set aside for reparations without disagreement, it has not been possible to reach concert of opinion on which industries are warlike and which are essentially peaceful.

Yesterday's statement to the FEC was an announcement of this Nation's determination that Japan must be placed without delay on her economic feet and that the United States is going to make an effort to that end. To do so, this Nation must take into its own hands, within the limits of funds allowed by Congress, these two vital functions:

1. The decision on what industries may be premitted to raise their level of production and how high that level may be.

2. Supply such industries with the raw materials they need to operate.

McCoy made it clear to the FEC yesterday that the United States had no intention of continuing alone to subsidize Japan with its consequent burden on the American taxpayers. He declared the Japanese government itself, under direction of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, must "prepare and implement plans under which Japan can become self-supporting at the earliest possible date."

Russians Let U. S. Newsmen See Ore Mines

By Edwin Shanke

Leipzig, Soviet-Occupied Saxony, Jan. 19 (Delayed) (AP).—The minister president of Saxony disclosed today that 25,000 Germans are toiling in the Erzegebirge (ore mountains) of southern Saxony, where the Russians have been reported mining uranium under the high-priority pressure of the atomic race.

They are being paid premium wages, comparing favorably with those of a "high state official," he added.

Efforts of American correspondents on a conducted tour of the Soviet zone to penetrate the triangular district of Aue, Marienberg and Annaberg were blocked by Russian authorities, although Maj. Gen. Timoffei Dudarov, acting military governor of Saxony, denied it was a "forbidden area."

Max Seydewitz, minister president of Saxony, said in an interview that 25,000 Germans are working in what he described as cobalt, zinc, lead and kaolin mines. He said this figure compared with 5000 to 6000 workers before the war, indicating the extent to which the Russians have developed the area.

Seydewitz said most of the miners earn 2000 marks monthly ($200 at the United States military rate of exchange) with top pay reaching as high as 3000 marks.

The pay of the average German worker would average from 75 to 250 marks a month.

Both General Dudarov and Seydewitz remained silent on the output of the mines and professed not to know that pitchblende, a source of uranium, was being mined. The German press has carried many stories saying uranium is being taken from the mines. Seydewitz confirmed that the entire production of the mines is going to the Soviet Union.

Driver Is Killed As Truck Topples, Rolls Into Ravine

Winchester, Va., Jan. 22.—Issac H. Nichols, 32, of Portsmouth, Va., was killed today when the trailer truck he was driving careened off Route 522, four miles north of here.

Virginia State Troopers E. B. Mitchell and Lewis Mosely said Nichols' truck rolled over and pitched into a ravine 150 feet off the highway. The accident happened at about 3:45 p. m.

They said the trailer was loaded with dismantled Army barracks. Nichols was crushed under them and it took an hour to free his body.

Britain Seen Halting Franc Devaluation

By William J. Humphreys

Paris, Jan. 21 (NYHT).—British protests were reported today to have halted approval of the French government's project to cut loose the franc on free money markets.

The British government was said to have feared serious damage to the pound sterling's value if the International Monetary Fund in Washington gave the French plan the green light.

Anxiety in London, it was said here, explained the delay in the fund's action on the devaluation project. Approval had been expected today.

As approved by the French Ministry of Finance, the franc devaluation scheme simply would replace financial black markets with official exchanges for foreign currencies and gold. The only exemptions to the law of supply and demand on these free markets would be French exporters and certain importers of essential, priority commodities.

These exemptions would deal in "export francs" available to them at 216 to the dollar, but all others would trade according to fluctuating values.

[Pointing up the effect in the United States of the proposed devaluation, the United Press said it would reduce the price of a bottle of French vintage wine from $4 to about $1.50. Paris "new look" dresses would go from $500 to less than $200.—Editor's Note.]

Britain is anxious to maintain her pound sterling's relations with the dollar without devaluation by her own design or external influence. The London government is said to consider France, always a great money-trading community before the war, too big an arena for the pound sterling to resist supply and demand. It is feared that it might be possible also to buy pounds sterling here for about $2.

Damascus Man Breaks Arm and Hip in Fall

A 20-foot fall from a second-story window of a home he was building resulted yesterday in a broken left arm and left him for Stanley Moyer, 44, of Damascus, Md.

Volunteer firemen who took Moyer to Suburban Hospital, where he was admitted, reported that he was reaching out of a window to clean snow off a portion of the roof. The firemen said Moyer fell on a pile of cinder blocks being used in the incompleted structure.

countries that always let themselves be bluffed."

Most important of all documents is the full German Foreign Office record of the historic Hitler-Molotov talks of November, 1940, in which Hitler tried to lure Russia into the German-Japanese-Italian alliance by urging Soviet expansion southward toward the Indian Ocean.

In one of these conversations, Hitler said the task of the Three-Power Pact was to exclude America and Britain from Europe, Asia and Africa.

Molotov expressed his agreement with the statements of the Fuehrer regarding the role of America and England," said the official German version of this talk. "The participation of Russia in the Tripartite Pact appeared to him entirely acceptable in principle, provided that Russia was to cooperate as a partner and not merely as an object. In that case he saw no difficulties in the matter of participation of the Soviet Union in the common effort."

But Molotov was wary and said little to commit Russia until he returned to Moscow. On his return he laid down the conditions under which Russia would join the alliance. He insisted on four points:

1. Clear recognition that Finland was in the Soviet sphere of influence;

2. A Soviet-Bulgarian mutual assistance pact;

3. "The establishment of a base for land and naval forces of the USSR within range of the Bosporus and the Dardanelles"; and

4. Assurance that "the area, south of Batum and Baku in the general direction of the Persian Gulf is recognized as the center of the aspirations of the Soviet Union."

The Kremlin never had an answer to these proposals. But within a month, on December 18, 1940, Hitler issued a secret order to his commanders to be prepared for a "quick campaign" to crush Russia and conquer everything to the Volga, from Archangel to the Caspian.

The contents of most of these documents have been known before. Former Secretary James F. Byrnes skimmed the cream from them in his book "Speaking Frankly," although reputable historians were denied access to them by the State Department. One exception was De Witt C. Poole, a former State Department official, who summarized them in the October, 1946, issue of "Foreign Affairs."

Naturally, they were published without Soviet consent, although it is almost unprecedented for one government to publish diplomatic documents about another in time of peace.

The present volume of documents is part of a huge three-power historical project under which the United States, Britain and France will publish twenty volumes of captured German foreign office documents dating as far back as 1918.

The American editors are Raymond J. Sontag, professor of history at the University of California, and James Stuart Beddie. The present documents, in a 362-page volume available for $1 at the Government Printing Office, will be reprinted in the final 20-volume series.

Acheson Assails Marshall Plan Cut

Arbitrary Slash Would End Usefulness, Former State Department Aide Says

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Former Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson said today that "arbitrary cuts" in the Marshall Plan would "destroy its usefulness and prove in the end the most costly sort of economy."

Describing the European recovery program as "the last best hope for recovery abroad and American security at home," Acheson said before a meeting of the National American Wholesale Grocers Association. That if the proposed $6,800,000,000 down-payment on the Marshall Plan is trimmed to five billion dollars or less, as suggested by some Republican leaders, then the "entire character of the program changes."

"It is not merely a recovery program reduced to two-thirds," he said. "It ceases to be a recovery program."

porting the European recovery plan and are cooperating fully with the State Department in connection therewith.

"As for the State Department taking over the non-military functions of the occupation, this suggestion originated with the Army which hoped for a take-over as early as July, 1946, and again last fall, but recognized the reasonableness of the State Department's request for delay."

Marshall said he and French Ambassador Bonnet have reached a complete understanding on France's objections to American-British economic organization of their zones of Germany.

late the economic and political unity of western Europe, and that "the project builds for peace in the world."

But he added what he called "constructive modifications and safeguards," at least one of which would strike at the heart of the plan as President Truman submitted it to Congress a month ago.

Taft Also Questions Plan

This was Hoover's proposal to ban the use of any American dollars to buy supplies from other Western Hemisphere countries and send them to Europe as free grants. Since most of these supplies would be surplus agricultural goods, he argued, the other Western Hemisphere countries themselves should extend the necessary credits to Europe.

"A partial guarantee, or advance, against such credits by the United States through the Export-Import Bank is the most that we should be asked to give," he said.

The Administration has proposed spending $2,165,000,000 outside the United States during the first 15 months of the program, arguing that the United States cannot possibly supply all that is needed and that other countries, like Canada, are short of dollars. So far nobody else of any prominence except Senator Robert A. Taft has challenged this part of the proposed plan.

As to the cost, Hoover mentioned no specific figure, but he urged reducing the proposed shipments of food and petroleum products and spreading the proposed 15-month's shipment of capital goods over a longer period. He also suggested using the private dollar assets of Europeans in this country as collateral for recovery loans.

Herter Plan Supported

Contrary to the views again expressed by Secretary Snyder to the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday, Hoover suggested that all shipments of capital goods to Europe be financed by repayable loans. The Administration contends it is impossible to draw a clear line between capital goods and consumable goods, and loans should be made only if a country is demonstrably able to repay.

As to the management of the recovery program, Hoover came out in general for the plan of Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) for a bipartisan policy board of private citizens as well as Cabinet officers.

He also came close to Herter's ideas by suggesting that local currencies, received from the resale of American goods, be deposited in the 16 countries "to the credit of the United States," and that the United States set up a commission in each country to use these funds for productive purposes.

Commitments Opposed

Finally, Hoover warned that "even a moral commitment to a four-year program is unwise" in view of all the uncertainties involved.

"We cannot enforce ideas upon other self-governing peoples," he said, "and we should keep ourselves entirely free to end our efforts without recrimination."

Meanwhile the Senate committee heard outright opposition to the Marshall Plan for the first time in its two weeks of hearings. It came from Henry Hazlitt, author of "Will Dollars Save the World?"

To the evident satisfaction of Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, (R., Iowa.), who has been critical of the program, Hazlitt argued that more American money would be futile as long as European governments continue their present policies.

Called 'Pleasant Illusion'

"The pleasant illusion that we can buy off the Russian nightmare merely by turning a few billions more of American taxpayers' dollars over to socialized European governments cannot much longer be maintained," Hazlitt said.

He branded as "utterly arbitrary and unscientific" the method by which the 16 European countries estimated their needs.

On the House side of the Capitol, Secretary Snyder again expressed the belief that perhaps in 1948, but probably in 1949, Congress would be asked for additional funds to stabilize European currencies. Snyder agreed with Representative Vorys (R., Ohio), who suggested that the Europeans repay their loans, where possible, in strategic materials.

Harriman Gives Views

Later Secretary Harriman told the House committee that world recovery could not be achieved if trade were shut off between eastern and western Europe. Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) suggested an "understanding" with western European countries about what goods they might ship into the Soviet sphere.

"The less we attempt to dominate the countries under this program, the better off we are," Harriman replied. And he predicted that more prosperity in western Europe would bring pressure for "a better life" within the Soviet Union.

"When the Soviet Union begins to pay more attention to a better life for its people and less to its military establishment, then there will be a more peaceful world," Harriman said.

Today the Senate committee will hear, among others, William J. Donovan, former head of the Office of Strategic Services, and Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War. The House committee will spend the day questioning Secretaries Anderson and Krug.

6 Witnesses Favor, 1 Assails Marshall Plan

(Senate Foreign Relations Committee.)

Henry Hazlitt, economist and author: Adoption of the Marshall Plan in its proposed form would be a profound mistake because of unsound European economic policies;

James F. O'Neil, national commander, the American Legion: The Marshall Plan is esesntial to block Communism;

Ray H. Brannaman, commander in chief, Veterans of Foreign Wars: European recovery is a vital American interest, but Congress should move cautiously on a yearly basis;

Oren Root, jr., of the American Veterans Committee: Congress should authorize the whole 4¼-year program, act before next April 1, and set up clear lines of responsibility in its management.

Ray Sawyer, national legislative director of Amvets: Congress should adopt the Marshall Plan, but provide also for the world's strongest air force, Western European union and business management.

House Foreign Affairs Committee

John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury: The plan is financially sound, but must be paid for out of current revenues;

W. Averell Harriman, Secretary of Commerce: The plan may increase prices in the United States, but its adoption is essential and its cost can be met.

Schwellenbach Acts in Strike employer is barred from sitting down to discuss wages and conditions with the union?

If the answer is "no," then another question must be answered: Does the law create a positive duty to bargain?

The ruling is expected today.

Major General Fleming is expected here this morning from a Chicago speaking engagement.

Fleming has the authority to close GSI cafeterias and is permitted to terminate the GSI contract on six months' notice.

Both GSI and the union said last night they had heard nothing from Schwellenbach himself.

Meanwhile, another incident of violence was reported in connection with the picketing of 40 cafeterias. Four of GSI's 1250 newly hired employes told police two men "kidnapped" a fellow Arlington Farms cafeteria worker in a taxicab at 14th st. and Constitution ave. nw. Police broadcast a lookout for the cab.

On the floor of the House, Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) questioned that authority under which the Labor Department and Supreme Court cafeterias were closed after the strike began January 5. He charged that the closings—ordered by Fleming at the request of Schwellenbach in the case of Labor and ordered by Supreme Court Marshal Thomas E. Waggaman in the other—has deprived people of the right to work. Hoffman, as chairman of a Labor Subcommittee, held a hearing on the matter Tuesday.

Congress Medal Hero Accused of Raping Girl, 15

Mount Holly, N. J., Jan. 21 (AP). A 23-year-old soldier who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Truman in August 1945 was held without bail today on a rape charge brought against him by the parents of a 15-year-old girl.

The soldier, Master Sergt. James R. Hendrix of Lepanto, Ark., pleaded innocent to the charge at arraignment.

Sergeant Hendrix, who has been stationed at Fort Dix since last June, received the Medal of Honor in a White House ceremony attended by his father, James Hendrix, a farmer, his mother and a cousin.

The day before the White House ceremony the elder Hendrix was escorted from the dining room of a Washington hotel because he was in his shirtsleeves. He was still coatless when President Truman pinned the medal on his son.

The citation told of Sergeant Hendrix's heroism during the Battle of the Bulge, in which he was credited with the destruction of two German artillery positions with a machinegun and the rescue of three trapped comrades.

Missing Girl Found Living With Sailor

JACQUELINE (JACKIE) HORNER
"We did nothing wrong"

San Francisco, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Jacqueline Horner, 15-year-old piano prodigy who vanished from her Hollywood home eight days ago, was found by police today in a hotel room with a sailor.

Inspector Joe Norton said detectives, acting on information supplied by acquaintenances of the girl, discovered her in a room with Wallace Wells, 19, a sailor stationed aboard a Navy tanker here.

The pretty, red-haired girl told police she met Wells last Friday and had been staying with him for several nights. She told police she arrived in San Francisco a week ago by bus and had stayed with various other sailors at different hotels."

Miss Horner insisted—at first hysterically and later calmly—that her relationship with Wells had been platonic and volunteered to submit to a physical examination.

Wells vouched for her claim.

"I was protecting her like a big brother," he said.

She said she pawned a pendant Actress Helen Hayes gave her to buy the bus ticket to San Francisco.

Jacqueline said she met Gloria Jean Costello, a night club photographer, on the bus at Fresno. The two girls, Jacqueline said, made the rounds of night clubs here, but quarreled Sunday after they saw her picture on the front page of a newspaper.

It was on Miss Costello's tip that police went to the hotel. When they entered the room, Jacqueline was hiding in a closet clad in a slip, police said.

The girl told police she spent the days "going to shows and walking." She admitted pawning a wrist watch.

At the police station, she unfolded a tale of a strict home life, no "dates" and eight hours' practice each day that bubbled into a runaway spirit.

"I always had to go to bed early," said Jacqueline. She had her hair dyed a dark titian by using some of the $32 she got from pawning her watch.

"I was always exhibited like a trained animal," she said. "I couldn't even go to school with the other kids. The only people I ever saw were my music teachers—three of them."

Martin Luther's Price Control Views Are Quoted to Senators

Martin Luther, sixteenth century leader of the Reformation, had his innings in Congress yesterday in support of price control.

His views on the subject of gouging merchants and greedy sellers were quoted to the Senate Banking Committee by Mrs. Annie Stein of the National Women's Trade Union League. She read from Luther's book, "On Trading and Usury," written in 1524.

In those days, Luther said, the merchants had as "their chief maxim and the basis of all their sharp practices" the philosophy that "I may sell my goods as dear as I can."

"Lo," said Luther, "that is giving place to avarice and opening every door and window to hell What does it mean? Only this: 'I care nothing about my neighbor; so long as I have my profit and satisfy my greed, what affair is it of mine if it does my neighbor 10 injuries at once?'"

The solution, Luther said, was for merchants to operate in the role of performing a service to their neighbors. But, implying that perhaps this would not work, he also suggested what amounted to a full-scale OPA. He wrote:

"The best and safest way should be for temporal authorities to appoint over this matter wise and honest men who would appraise the cost of all sorts of wares and fix accordingly the outside price at which the merchant would get his due and have an honest living."

Meat Packers Warn Of Black Markets

Controls Couldn't Work, Group Says, And Aren't Needed, 'Emergency' Lacking

Restoration of rationing and price controls on meat would result only in less meat and black markets, counsel for a meat packers' group told the Senate Banking Committee yesterday.

Wilbur L. Roe, jr., representing the National Independent Meat Packers Association, argued that the controls could not be made to work and were unnecessary since there was no "emergency."

The supply of meat, he said, is ample, with Agriculture Department forecasts indicating 146 pounds per capita in 1948, or more than in any but four previous years. These figures did not support earlier testimony by Agriculture Secretary Anderson that there would be a meat shortage, La Roe declared.

Anderson told the committee last week, however, that though the per person supply was larger than in most previous years, the factor causing shortage and bidding up of prices was the unprecedentedly large purchasing power in the Nation.

Committee chairman Tobey (R., N. H.), who favors controls insisted that "something is wrong with the picture when great corporations are making the largest profits in history . . . and soaking the public the highest prices in history."

"Before God, something's got to be done," he said fervently. "When the house is on fire, we've got to put it out."

Tobey named a five-man subcommittee headed by Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) to study Flanders' bill to set up meat rationing machinery. The group also will consider legislation to give Anderson permanent power to ration grain use by distillers.

Earlier yesterday, the committee heard from Mrs. Joseph Low of the National Council of Jewish Women. She asked for return of price controls and said it would be an "injustice" to Americans to "assume that they lack the wisdom" to accept them.

Another witness was Mrs. Annie Stein of the National Women's Trade Union League. She said, "the people are angry and bitter" over high prices and their bitterness "will not die down" until prices are cut.

3 'Incidents' Laid to Murphy

guage to Pvt. William E. Love at the Fire Department repair shop following the party.

Murphy, who had been up most of the night fighting two multiple-alarm fires, angrily attempted to make a statement denying the added allegations.

"I think the board should know about that because the integrity of a man has been attacked by you," he declared, pointing to Maher. Austin F. Canfield, board chairman, said Murphy could not make a statement at that time, as the incidents were not before the board as charges.

Later, testifying on a charge that he was intoxicated at a three-alarm fire at 15th and L sts. nw. on February 15, 1947, Murphy declared that he participated in the fire-fighting in active command of his men, and was partially overcome by smoke.

He said he had only "two or three" bottles of beer at a friend's house previously. At the blaze, he said, he brushed off efforts of a fire surgeon to give him oxygen after becoming "somewhat" naseous from heavy smoke.

Four firemen have testified he was drunk at the time, while defense council Martin F. O'Donoghue said he would put on "10 or 20" witnesses tomorrow to prove Murphy was sober.

To counter Love's charge that Murphy was intoxicated at the repair shop, Detective Pvt. Harry Statz, Murphy's aide and driver, Varah (who also saw Murphy that night according to testimony), and Pvt. Joseph H. Price all testified he was perfectly sober at the time.

Defense put three witnesses on the stand to challenge Love's veracity, testifying that Love did not appear at Engine Company 14 the morning of September 14, 1946, when Love said he left the repair shop to get a tire which needed repairs. Love is the only prosecution witness on two charges based on the day's events.

Love gave the tire call as his explanation why he was not at the repair shop when Murphy called there earlier about a battery. Fire company records introduced by defense showed no record of Love's visit, while Love's time card indicated he had gone to the company.

Murphy testified that when he reached the repair shop he told Love, "You people better get to hell on the job here. I'm damn sick and tired of the way you and Fearn (Otto C. Fearn, superintendent of machinery, now retired) have been doing your job here. If you don't, I'm going to get rid of both of you."

Love has testified that Murphy used stronger, unjustified language, on that occasion.

Murphy said that preceding this he had "about two" drinks of bourbon at a hotel farewell party for Col. Joseph D. Arthur, former assistant District Engineer Commissioner.

Following this, he said he had "two or three" more drinks at the hotel's cocktail lounge with Dent, Maj. James R. Lusby, District disbursing officer; Fire Marshall Roberts and Robert Buck, Washington Daily News reporter.

GOP Plans Budget Action

proval of the Knutson bill, possibly next Monday or Tuesday, was taken for granted.

Republican leadership plans call for moving the tax cuts to the House floor next Wednesday or Thursday. Speaker Martin, who originally predicted passage late next week, said the final vote may wait until the following Monday.

Martin said yesterday's two-House leadership review of all major pending legislation was designed "to see what's ahead of us." He said members of the two steering groups aired their views on each measure as it came up, but without attempt to reach decisions on individual bills.

Taft meanwhile called a meeting of his own Senate majority policy committee tomorrow and said a conference of all Senate Republicans may be held next week on the budget. Taft told reporters Congress has "deadlines" to meet on other measures, notably the February 28 expiration date of the present rent-control law.

Cement Plant Blast Is Fatal to Four

Colton, Calif., Jan. 21 (AP).—A powder magazine at the California Portland Cement Co. plant blew up today, killing four men, Coroner R. E. Williams reported.

The blast shattered windows in San Bernardino, five miles distant, including a big plate glass window in the Bank of America at the city's main downtown corner. Several pedestrians narrowly escaped injury from fragments.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday delayed indefinitely a hearing on charges against Mrs. Esther Lazarus, who operates Esther's Grill at 521 Massachusetts ave. nw. She is charged with 30 violations of ABC regulations.

The hearing was originally scheduled for yesterday, but Mrs. Lazarus' attorney, Charles E. Ford, was unable to appear.

Corcoran School Closing Postponed to June

Closing of the Corcoran Elementary School scheduled for February 1 was postponed to June yesterday by the Board of Education.

At its regular meeting the board also:

1. Announced the retirement of nine teachers with long service in District schools.

2. Filled the positions of principal of Eliot Junior High School and head of the white evening and summer schools.

John M. Fletcher, 3631 Minnesota ave. se., was appointed principal of Eliot. Charles C. Knight, 1630 Park rd. nw., was named to the night school post.

Fletcher, a graduate of Wilson Teachers College and the Teachers College of Columbia University, has been assistant principal at Eliot since September 1946.

Knight, a teacher in the District since 1932, has served as acting head of the night schools since September.

The board postponed closing of the Corcoran 28th & M sts. nw., until it can be determined if extensive building and remodeling of homes in Georgetown will result in an increased school attendance by white children.

The Corcoran school was scheduled to be closed as an economy measure.

Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning said that continued use of Corcoran also will depend upon the results of a city-wide survey of the cost of operating schools.

Teachers retiring are:

Miss C. Belle Meyers, 6355 Utah ave. nw., physical education teacher at Woodrow Wilson High School, after 40 years.

Miss Katherine L. Carroll, 1015 Jackson st. ne., teacher at the Seaton School, after 39 years.

Mrs. Edna R. Koontz, 7373 Largo rd. se., Benning School teacher, after 33 years.

F. Aloysius Horstkamp, 1214 Jackson st. ne., manual arts teacher in the elementary schools, after 20 years.

Miss Zita E. Dyson, 1118 P st. nw., French and Spanish teacher at Shaw Junior High School, 46 years.

Mrs. Margaret C. Marsh, 3420 16th st. nw., teacher at the Cooke School, 38 years.

Mrs. Mary M. Jones, 1129 24th st. nw., English and Geography teacher at Francis' Junior High School, 47 years.

Mrs. Mary M. Boling, 3522 Quebec st. nw., instructor at Wilson Teachers College, 47 years.

Board Orders Hazards Removed in School Shop

Prompt changes to promote safety in shop rooms at Armstrong High School were ordered yesterday.

The revisions, ranging from covering exposed electric wiring to placing safety guards on a paper cutter, were ordered by the Board of Education's buildings and grounds by the Board of Education's buildings and grounds committee.

Its action followed a meeting with representatives of the Armstrong Parent-Teacher and alumni association.

Also cited in the hazards were shop machines with wiring defects. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent in charge of Negro schools, told the committee that equipment was "admittedly in poor condition" at the school.

He added that three of the machines should be removed and three others should be repaired.

A plan to have shop students work on some of the equipment as a laboratory project has been proposed by Wilkinson, but is awaiting arrival of materials.

He said the machinery at Armstrong was in use 24 hours a day during the war and is now used from 8:30 a. m. to 10:30 p. m., in training regular students and those studying under the GI bill.

The 1949 budget carries a $27,000 replacement request the official said.

out resort to the delay and expense of litigation."

First Assistant Superintendent of Schools Garnet C. Wilkinson, who heads the Negro schools, said that there "will be no reward for students who have stayed out on strike."

They will receive no grades until they complete courses broken off on December 3d when they left school, he said. They will be required to double up on courses next semester or attend summer school if they are to keep up with their classes.

Severer Charge Possible

Board member Adelbert W. Lee said that parents may face a more severe legal charge than that of violating the attendance law if they persist in the strike. He suggested that school officers look into the possibility of bringing a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

"It is the duty of the board to see that laws are properly administered," Lee said.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, board president, pointed out that action must be brought under the attendance law since it was "designed to protect children."

Corning reported that 195 students are still on strike at Blow and Webb.

He said 110 children returned to classes in the annexes after truant officers visited their parents. Two-hundred and sixty-two returned before the visits.

Two Pupils Sue District

In another action two students of Browne School, claiming they have been denied an equal educational opportunity granted white children, yesterday asked District Court for $110,000 damages.

Named defendants in the suit were Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, and members of the Board of Education.

The suit also asked District Court to declare the Browne School's facilities inferior to those of white schools here and to order a surplus of white school facilities turned over for the use of Negro children.

The amount of damages sought were classified as compensatory damages $10,000 and punitive damages, $100,000.

Wants Surplus Facilities

The suit was filed by Judine Consuelo Bishop, 14, and her father Gardner L. Bishop of 1113 Montello ave. ne., and Barbara Jean Arnold, 14, and her mother, Mrs. Edith H. Arnold of 707 24th st. ne.

The suit charges that the school board "maliciously deprives the Negro pupils of equal educational opportunity solely because of their race" and that it has "surplus facilities for white pupils" which it refuses to transfer to Negro students despite the overcrowded conditions in their schools. The suit does not name any surplus facilities.

Eastland Criticizes Supreme Court

Says Majority Is 'Not Judicially Honest'; Holds Anti-Lynching Bills Unconstitutional

By the United Press

Round two of the renewed fight over antilynch legislation yesterday brought charges by Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) that a majority of the present United States Supreme Court is "not judicially honest and won't administer the law."

Eastland, a member of a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee considering several antilynching bills, said that all the proposals are unconstitutional. He argued that no new legislation is needed because "lynching is just murder."

Representatives of Negro and Jewish organizations asserted that lynching amounts to Government "abdication to the mob." They urged passage of a bill by Senators Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) and Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.) which would make members of a lynch mob liable to fines of $10,000 and 20 years in jail. It also would punish negligent law enforcement officials by fines of $5000 and five years imprisonment.

Eastland based his criticism of the Supreme Court on its recent decision directing Oklahoma to provide a law education for a Negro girl, and on a pending court case testing the legality of restrictive real estate covenants.

Alibi Defense Strengthened

cessfully defended on a first-degree murder charge in 1944, declared that Mrs. Hobbs "last March 14 or 15" asked him to lend her $150 because she was in trouble.

Carrier said he loaned her $100 and afterwards she confessed that "she was pregnant and wanted to get an abortion."

Carrier testified that the young woman, unmarried at that time, told him then that the man responsible for her pregnancy, "a flier or something" had gone back to Hawaii.

Carrier said he asked Mrs. Hobbs why she didn't ask Laughlin for the money since they had been good friends.

He testified she replied:

"He's given me money on other occasions and I've asked him about it but this time he flatly refuses."

Questioned on Money

Under questioning by Prosecutor McLaughlin the witness admitted that he was not regularly employed at the time of the loan. He said he had bought a house and was decorating it.

"Where did you get the money for the loan?" demanded McLaughlin.

"I always have that kind of money in my pocket," Carrier retorted.

He testified that around March 3 or 4 he saw Mrs. Hobbs and Mrs. Irma Petrain, a nurse at whose home the abortion was alleged to have taken place, at the apartment of Marvin Rexrode in the Dorchester House.

He said Mrs. Hobbs conversed with Mrs. Petrain in the kitchen and appeared anxious and excited when she reentered the living room.

Flasphaler Claims 'Persecution'

Charles Flasphaler, a business associate of Laughlin's was recalled to the stand. He testified that his conviction for criminal libel in New York State in 1933 stemmed from "political persecution."

Earlier Orille C. Gaudette, an attorney of 1010 Vermont ave. nw., testified that Laughlin had conferred with him on a law case March 18 from about 6 p. m. to "11:15 or 11:30 p. m."

(March 18 had been one of the dates mentioned by Mrs. Hobbs as the time Laughlin first took her to Mrs. Petrain's in a preliminary step toward abortion.)

Another lawyer, Robert W. McCullough, declared that on March 19, Laughlin and he discussed legal matters at McCullough's office from 7 p. m. to "10:30 or 11 p. m."

(March 19 had been mentioned by Mrs. Hobbs as the night she left Laughlin at Mrs. Petrain's while she was driven to the doctor's office for the first attempt at abortion.)

Laughlin's alibi defense was further strengthened by Dr. Benjamin Rones, an ophthalmologist, who testified that he treated the attorney for an eye condition on March 21 and 22.

He declared that Laughlin had told him he'd been treated on March 19 at the Episcopal Eye and Ear Hospital.

Cross examination by McLaughlin brought out that the record of Laughlin's alleged visit to the hospital was missing and that a search had been unsuccessful.

Under questioning by Laughlin, the physician said that it sometimes happened "unfortunately" that records are lost.

Housing Pinch

We do not see how Congress can resist the powerful plea that has been made by local groups appearing before the Senate-House Committee on Housing for an immediate program of public housing in the District of Columbia. The bitter truth is that no housing for low-income families is being built here. Nor can any construction of this type be anticipated in the foreseeable future without public aid. Worse than that is the fact that extensive removal of temporary wartime housing is scheduled to begin five months hence and no plans have been made to recoup that loss of residential space.

Add to this the fact that 17,000 families are clamoring for accommodations in the 8774 units under management of the National Capital Housing Authority and already occupied. Among these are 6000 veterans' families who did not have a fair chance to obtain housing during the war and have been squeezed out since by the suspension of building in the low-rental brackets. To our way of thinking these facts give the situation an urgency that can be met only by prompt and courageous action in approving a public-housing program.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that the Redevelopment Land Agency is not yet in operation. It is still awaiting a grant of funds. To this agency has been assigned the enormously important task of clearing Washington's slums. Even when it has been granted funds, it can scarcely operate on a large scale until low-rental houses can be provided to relieve the present pressure of population on the slum areas. Slum dwellers cannot be moved into the street while rotten old housing is being replaced by modern units. For this reason we think it is of the utmost importance to permit the NCHA to go ahead with the purchase of land and construction of low-rental dwellings until the present critical shortages are overcome.

Cooperative Venture

There is no unbridgeable gap, as we see it, between President Truman's request for an economic cooperation administration and Senator Taft's proposal that the European Recovery Program be directed by an independent administrator. Officials are in general agreement that the new agency, whatever its composition, should not be in the State Department. That is Secretary Marshall's view. But the President and Secretary Marshall want the ERP administrator to be subject to the direction of the Secretary of State "on decisions and actions affecting our foreign policy." Senator Taft, on the other hand, would make the ERP administrator a member of the Cabinet—on a par with the Secretary of State.

It is at this point, in our opinion, where the Senator's logic fails him. His proposal would give the country two Secretaries of State—one to direct our normal long-range dealing with other countries and the other to carry out this specific policy of aiding recovery in western Europe. Both having Cabinet status, their differences could be resolved only by the overworked President. We should have to expect clashes between the two until divergent programs came to such an impasse that personal intervention by the President would become imperative. This tendency of rival administrators working in the same field to pull in opposite directions was made so strikingly clear by our wartime experience that we do not see how a Senator who aspires to the Presidency can seriously advocate dual control in an area of policy-making so vital to the national interest.

A vote by Congress for Senator Taft's proposal would constitute, moreover, a vote of no confidence in Secretary Marshall. That inescapable conclusion would, of course, be drawn by foreign governments. Noting that Congress did not trust Secretary Marshall to supervise his own scheme for aiding reconstruction in Europe, they would be inclined to work with the new Secretary of State for ERP to the detriment of normal diplomatic relations. Thus the recovery program would tend to defeat its own purposes by weakening our long-range relations with the countries of western Europe instead of strengthening them.

In essence the Marshall Plan is an adventure in cooperation. Its underlying aim is to draw the democratic powers closer together for the preservation of peace and the promotion of their common economic welfare. There is grave danger that this enlightened concept may be squeezed out of ERP by divorcing it from the main currents of American international policy. Of course, Europe would be benefited by economic help regardless of how it might be granted. But if the United States is to reap the maximum benefit from this venture, it must be made an integral part of our foreign policy. In addition to stabilizing currencies, rebuilding railroads and enabling economies to function smoothly, ERP should draw governments and peoples closer together. To us this seems impossible of accomplishment without a direct and intimate tie between the recovery program and the men who are responsible for our foreign policy.

Clay's Localitis

Localitis is a disease from which very few of our diplomats and administrators are free. It consists of a yielding to the exclusive claims of the environment in which they are operating. Perhaps the most notorious example was Walter Hines Page. Page, when he was the American Ambassador in Britain in the First World War, was charged with being more British than the British. Even Secretary Marshall has confessed that in policy matters he felt the pull of the country to which he was posted when he went on his mission to China. Now John Foster Dulles alleges that General Clay, who is in charge of our military government in Germany, has an acute attack of the same disease. In other words, he is acting as if Germany were an island, without reference to Germany's neighbors, or, rather, its western neighbors.

It is true that General Clay's actions lend color to the allegation. His habit in conference of talking about "our Germans" was no doubt recalled in Washington when officials read Mr. Dulles' statement. But the echo of Mr. Dulles that will be more pronounced will come from those Western neighbors who are the alleged victims of General Clay's localitis. Many instances could be cited. The Dutch, for instance, feel—quite justifiably, in our opinion—that Dutch ports have been neglected as outlets for Ruhr products. These were so used before the war. In the restoration of the working economy of Europe, which is the object of the Marshall Plan, they must be so used again. But Bizonia clings to Bremen and Hamburg because of the need to keep the transport trade within Germany. Perhaps the French are the most critical of General Clay. Their last complaint was over the economic government, as they call the Bizonial economic council, which is under organization. Aside from some resentment that they had been neglected in consultation, they grumbled because of the overcentralization that this would introduce to Germany. There was some merit in the French case. As Secretary Marshall has himself said, any step in Germany should take French susceptibilities into account. Some of their fears may be irrational. They are hesitant and cautious on commitments on common action. But their ideas about Germany are based upon a deep knowledge as well as a fear of Germany. At any rate, the move in western Germany was another proof to them that General Clay is a Francophobe.

General Clay is one of the ablest administrators and one of the most supple negotiators at America's disposition. He also has the worst job of any American representative. He is probably so immersed in his assignment of trying to make his jurisdiction a success that he can give little thought to ERP. At the same time, certain facts have to be recognized. There would probably have been no need for a Marshall Plan—at least of the present dimensions—if wartime destruction and post-war Morgenthauism had not combined to leave industrial Germany a slum. By the same token, western Europe can recover only with the aid of Europe's workshop, viz, Germany's Ruhr. It follows that no time can be lost in integrating western Europe into Marshall Europe. We have already suggested that to the next meeting of the Marshall countries representatives of western Germany, Germans as well as officials of the occupying powers, should be invited as founder members.

That would be the best opportunity of meeting another of Mr. Dulles' suggestions. He thinks that the military should give place to the civilian in the administration of Germany. The implication is that the military are trying to retain the assignment. This is entirely false. The Army in this as in other matters would like nothing better than to hand over the duty to the State Department. But the latter keeps postponing the transfer, thereby, incidentally, adding to domestic criticism of the military in civilian concerns. It is not strange that there should be localitis in military government in Germany. What is strange, and what may be dangerous, is that the State Department keeps on shirking a responsibility in Germany which is so essentially civilian.

Canadian Change

There is no denying that to many Canadians, within and outside of his own party, Mr. Mackenzie King, who has announced his approaching retirement as Prime Minister of Canada, is something of an anachronism. He is a politician in the Victorian tradition, lacking all those qualities of personal dynamism and magnetism which are now considered necessary in a head of state. Modest and almost shy in his personal manner, unimpressive as a speaker, and with a contemplative rather than an active cast of mind, he owes his success more to his ability to analyze and to exploit current political tendencies than to any power over the popular imagination or any ability to arouse his followers to great enthusiasm. Save where his hand was forced, as it was in the case of the conscription bill, or where he felt the Dominion to be in a state of imminent peril, as in the case of the Gouzenko revelations, he rarely took any decisive action until he felt assured of the support of the greater part of the inhabitants of the Dominion. This has doubtless been one of the secrets of his long tenure in office; another has been the mediocre and myopic leadership of the Conservative opposition.

He rose in Canadian politics as a protege of the great liberal statesman, Sir Wilfred Laurier, under whom Mr. King served for a time as Minister of Labor. But this rise was considerably aided by his descent from the William Lyon Mackenzie who led the abortive revolt of 1837. Both these factors help to explain the confidence placed in him by the French population. By virtue of this support, as well as by personal conviction, Mr. King became the representative of the continental as distinguished from the overseas outlook in Canadian affairs. That is to say, he gave less emphasis to the role of Canada as a member of the British Commonwealth than to its role as a member of the North American family of nations, and he has been oftener en rapport with Washington than with London.

In the speech in which he announced that it is his purpose to retire, Mr. King devoted a good many paragraphs to the "appalling danger" to the peace and freedom of the world which have resulted from Communist ambitions and practices. This is a point on which Mr. King has been expensively instructed. He had refused to take seriously the Communist conspiracy in Canada until unmistakable evidence of its reality and extent was placed before him. Then he found it necessary to declare a complete suspension of civil liberties in Canada, lest more of the conspirators be permitted to escape. This suspension, of course, was an utter negation of the liberal principles he had so long professed; and it would not be surprising one day to hear that it crystallized a conviction that in such a world Victorian liberals like himself have lost their usefulness.

Turning On The Light

No. II

Congressional inquiries should be dedicated to enlightenment and not to persecution.

Abuses have crept into congressional investigations at a time when the investigative process is more important than ever before. Congress finds itself in need of factual and well balanced information in many different fields. It must make use of the investigative function in order to save itself from acting in ignorance. What it gets from some of its investigators, however, is biased half-truths built up from distorted evidence. Other committees resort to such questionable methods as to incite widespread reaction against what they are undertaking to do.

One congressional investigator conducting hearings on the Forest Service is reported to have told a witness that he did not wish to have any testimony favorable to that agency; he was seeking only adverse information. Representative Clare Hoffman recently sought to make his investigating power as chairman of a House Subcommittee on "education" into a club for intimidation of newspapermen. First he requested two representatives of the Washington Star to answer questions about an editorial that he did not like. Then he summoned Mr. Alfred Friendly of The Washington Post, swore him as a witness and grilled him as to the sources of a news story he had written. About the same time the New York Herald Tribune quoted Mr. Hoffman as saying that he intended to call to the witness stand all newspapermen who write articles which, in his opinion, accuse members of Congress of "unfair or disreputable conduct."

The "you're a liar" contest between Senator Owen Brewster, chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, and Howard Hughes is so fresh in the public memory that no review of the circumstances is required here. The important fact to remember is that this congressional inquiry was permitted to descend to the level of a personal wrangle. Such misuse of the investigative power promptly reacted against Senator Brewster in the public mind. The unfortunate thing is that the committee and Congress itself suffered a slump in prestige along with the Senator who abused his power.

Out in Hollywood last August Irving McCann, counsel for a congressional investigating subcommittee, engaged in a rud shouting contest with Joseph A. Padway (now deceased) general counsel for th AFL, then seized him by the throat, ac cording to news reports, and struck hir three times. Other committees have con pelled witnesses to testify in secret, or having summoned witnesses to testify, have denied them the right to state their own views. Some legislators have so utterly departed from the practices of fair play as to make their charges first and then seek corroboration through use of the investigative machinery. And the House Committee on Un-American Activities is seeking to imprison ten alleged Communists for refusing to testify against themselves, even though the committee had, from other sources, all the information it needed properly to enlighten the public.

In our opinion, these undemocratic methods ought to be corrected, both as a matter of treating citizens fairly and as a means of preserving the usefulness of congressional investigative machinery.

TIME KEEPER

The heart, thrust down within the breast,
Must lie in darkness, all alone;
It is strange, impassioned guest
To live behind a wall of bone;

Whether it's drumming out the day,
Or locked in battlements of sleep,
It wears the tides of life away—
Slow thunder, beautiful and deep.

"Future Of The Chest"

Your editorial of January 13, "Future of the Chest," suggests that one of the antidotes for the failure of the Community Chest to reach its goal is the immediate merger of the Washington Chest and the Council of Social Agencies, because now "the Chest serves as a mere financial superstructure for activities under the aegis of the council."

When we face the facts of life, that is what the Chest is, and that is what it should be. It is the financial agent of those privately supported welfare agencies which agree to pool their public solicitation of funds into one campaign. The Chest raises and disburses the money in a manner satisfactory to the agencies. Generally the Chest raises only about one third of the operating budgets of its member agencies, and it prevents a multiplicity of individual campaigns for funds.

A Council of Social Agencies, or a better name, a Welfare Council, is an over-all planning and coordinating body, made up of all health, welfare and recreation agencies in the community and all civic organizations interested in these fields of community service. The community service agencies in the council include all public agencies, privately supported agencies and Chest-supported private agencies. Such a council is supported by and is responsible to its member agencies.

If the Chest-supported agencies wish to make their contribution to their over-all program-planning and coordinating group through a Chest allocation to the council, rather than individual contributions as other member agencies of the council do, that is their prerogative. That, however, does not make the council a Chest agency and the council is not responsible to the Chest, but only its membership.

On the other hand, the Chest is not responsible to or for the council. The Chest is responsible to the agencies for which it solicits funds. The agencies in the Chest are responsible to the public for the expenditure of those funds. The council is the forum and planning and coordinating body for all agencies engaged in health welfare and recreation, whether Chest-supported or not, and for all civic, educational and religious organizations interested in and supporting services devoted to the commonweal. To try to combine the Chest and council would only add to the confusion and seriously handicap the work of both.

Josephus Daniels

Your editorial of January 16 on Josephus Daniels reflects most clearly his ability to accept the objectionable and make the best of it. A few days prior to Mr. Daniels' death, Drew Pearson gratefully mentioned his willingness to help young newspapermen. As a young reporter back in the twenties, I had an experience with him that demonstrates both traits and also endeared him forever to me.

Covering the hotel news beat for a morning newspaper in Jacksonville, Fla., I frequently interviewed notables from all fields. One day's work often would bring three or even more interviews, and the subjects might range from Ida M. Tarbell's fight against monopoly through August Heckscher's theories of real estate development for human welfare, and on into the fields of anthropology and the work of Professor Yerkes of Yale.

After a full day of this, topped off by some enthusiastic imbibing, I got a call from the city editor to interview Mr. Daniels at the Seminole Hotel. It was about 10 p. m. when I got to his room. He was on a lecture tour of Florida, espousing prohibition and fighting the efforts of the wets to bring about repeal. After a few minutes of talk he sized up the situation, and said:

"Young man, why don't you lie down on my bed and take a little snooze? I know this story and I'll write it for you."

Thirty minutes later he woke me up and handed me a good story, written much better than I could have done it even earlier in the day. He not only saved my hide, but got his story across the way he wanted it.

Diet of Threats

It seems to me that the American people must be getting very tired of threats. I turn on my radio and am told that Mr. Forrestal says that unless we carry out the Marshal Plan—we will be left alone in a hostile world. A minute after that I am told that my child may be struck by infantile paralysis; I must therefore join the March of Dimes.

Marshall's Leadership

It is not surprising that the American public is confused on foreign issues. The isolationists of the twenties with unenlightened selfishness, ignoring this country's responsibilities regarding the balance of world power, played a major part in plunging the world into World War II.

On the other hand, the interventionists with the right idea made so many blunders in execution, so many hideous mistakes in dealing with Russia and the post-war Germany, France, England, etc. that the isolationists have no trouble in arguing that the interventionists are the chief offenders.

I believe our country is in even graver danger than the average citizen thinks. If Russia gains possession of the European bastion, I do not believe we can resist communism five years, though there may be no shooting war.

So what to do? Well, we have at least one man in public life who all agree has no ax to grind and who is an able and sincere patriot. Give Gen. George C. Marshall a chance to pull us out of this hole and try to make some friends or at least reliable allies as we go along. And above all, cut out the cant. Our motives are pretty good. Don't try to make them out angelic.

Case Against Home Rule

Your editorial of January 15, "Opportunity Missed," while referring to Mr. Guy Mason as a better-than-average Commissioner, asserted that his influence is negative insofar as the great issue now before the local community is concerned. It was stated that he continues the old regime that, out of habit and personal interests, is antagonistic to the proposed reforms, and that the transition from the obsolete government now in operation to the new council-manager system could be greatly facilitated by a Commissioner sympathetic with the shift. These statements generated three questions in the mind of the writer:

1. What has made this issue great, other than a mass of propaganda?

2. Why should it have been expected that the President would seek and appoint a successor Commissioner who is sympathetic with the shift; and why should it be incumbent upon either one or all of the Commissioners to strive for a change in the method of operating the District government?

3. What is so obsolete about the present form of the District government that could not be properly remedied by Congress and the District authorities, without agitating a drastic change in the method of operation?

Numerous statements emanated from various sources during the past several months in regard to the proposed change, all of which seemingly were epitomized before a luncheon meeting of the Family and Child Welfare Division of the Council of Social Agencies, as reported in The Washington Post December 16, 1947, namely:

(1) Restore democracy in the District of Columbia; (2) modernize and streamline the administrative structure of the local government; (3) relieve Congress of the burden of functioning as a District council; (4) provide better service at less cost to the taxpayer.

The proposed combining of numerous local agencies into 14 major departments and 7 semi-independent agencies is termed "streamlining," but there does not appear to be any analysis of the effective results. That the plan would relieve Congress of the burden of District affairs appears to be an overstatement, inasmuch as the Federal Government would continue to be involved in determining the amount of the Federal payment to be made to the District each year, and Congress would continue to retain the control over District affairs that the Constitution now requires.

Furthermore, apparently no effort has been made to produce any evidence tending to be conclusive that the services to be provided after the transition will be better and that the cost to the taxpayers will be less. Surely, creating 17 offices—12-member council, 4-member election board, and city manager at a salary approximating the combined salaries of the Commissioners, is not an aim at reduction in expenses.

I have naturally become imbued with the idea that I do not stand alone in my questioning attitude regarding the proposed change, or that I am party to a minority in this respect. Following an abundance of propaganda, on November 5, 1946, a plebiscite was conducted in the District. Your editorial on that subject on November 7, 1946, stated that it was a disappointment; that some 600,000 people were estimated to be eligible to cast ballots, and that only 170,000 did so—a figure far short of the quarter million hoped for. It was further stated that the volume of votes against the inauguration of local self-government was altogether dismaying; and, that as it turned out, no more than about one fifth of the District residents eligible to do so actually registered a demand for home rule.

It logically follows that four fifths of the people eligible to vote in this plebiscite had no interest in the affair and did not desire home rule for the District of Columbia. Disappointment and dismay could therefore have been suffered by only a minority group.

In the Woodridge area, a section of the District comprised of 20,000 or more inhabitants, the majority of the votes cast on the local suffrage issue were in opposition thereto. Inasmuch as this association believes in supporting the rightful desires of its members and the people of the Greater Woodridge area, as indicated by the majority, at the regular monthly meeting held January 14 unanimously reiterated its stand against the proposed home rule for the District, this was deemed to be in support of the expressed wishes of the majority of the residents of this neighborhood.

Older Set's Inning

By Malvina Lindsay

Age Must Be Served

THINGS SEEM to be picking up for the men and women past 65. The Knutson bill in Congress would give them an additional $600 exemption on incomes. In many States political candidates are discovering the power of the old-age pension vote. And a recent study by a New York legislative committee shows that industry rates the past 65 worker as an asset—in dollars and cents.

What is more, older workers generally are holding the jobs a wartime economy opened to many of them. The rate of unemployment is no greater among older people than among younger adults—as yet—reports the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It says 1½ million more older persons are working than was previously considered normal. Though Ewan Clague, commissioner of the bureau, warns that in a depression older workers would be among the first hit, such workers, because of their present performance, should have better standing than they had in the 1930s.

True, there is a catch in the term "older," as used by the bureau. It includes men past 55 and women past 35. But also in this "decrepit" company are about three million workers past 65, as the New York study showed.

THIS SURVEY of 1000 employers, made by the State Joint Legislative Committee on Problems of the Aging, turned up some significant findings. It showed employers generally rated their workers past 65 as being more experienced and loyal and less absent than their juniors. Three out of four employers said they were fully as productive. Many employers paid tribute to their judgment and ability.

The New York survey is one of the first attempts to plan for the changing social set-up in American life. In 30 years one half of all Americans will be past 45. Fifteen per cent will be past 65. This means that the middle-aged and elderly will steadily attain greater economic and political importance.

Before the war older workers were being increasingly pushed out of the labor market. An example of this attitude is the way the listing of women past 35 as "older workers" hangs on. One small compensation for war's tragedy was that economic opportunities opened to older men and women.

The problem ahead is not so much how to pension the country's aging population but how to enable them to be useful. Older people need the psychic satisfaction of work as well as its financial reward. Authorities on gerontology (science of aging) repeatedly stress that the elderly should be kept productive and made to feel they are needed.

The New York committee is urging that industry study its older workers and find what jobs they can do best as a basis for future use of human skills. Industry also needs to revise its rigid and superficial age schedules, which are based wholly on calendar age, not on physical and mental capacity. These often lead to retirement of valuable workers.

INCREASING political power of elderly groups also presents a problem. This has potential good—and peril. It can bring judgment and maturity into public affairs. It can also be a pressure for all sorts of wild economic schemes. Worse still, it can assure political dominance of the cautious, jellied mind, and the look-backward attitude. As a balance to this, the movement to lower the voting age is expected to grow. But this will help only if education can step up political maturity in American youth.

This country up to now has had much of the pioneer attitude toward age—that of relegating to the shelf those no longer able to swing axes or handle mule teams. It has not shown the appreciation of maturity and age found in many older civilizations. Thus it has wasted or lost much contribution from matured judgment and talent.

It may be that the tide is now turning. But those who will be the elderly 10, 20 or 30 years from now cannot afford to depend merely on power of numbers to win them security and appreciation. They should begin to see to it now that plans are made to give them opportunity rather than handouts. But how well age is served in the ensuing years will also depend on what age has to contribute. To this end, the big personal job is to keep the arteries of mind as well as body from hardening.

VA Medical Probe

I read with dismay and shock, not unmixed with horror, that the new medical director of the Veterans' Administration, Dr. Paul Magnuson, is sending a list of doctors to the American Medical Association for disciplinary action in cases involving the outraging of our veterans. He limits the investigation to physicians mistreating out-patients. This investigation should be immediate, unlimited and most certainly not anonymous.

The greatest duty and debt our country can have is to its disabled veterans and their families. No country has ever spent more dollars per veteran than our own or received less for the money spent.

The American Medical Association is not a Federal agency, any more than the Red Cross. This is nothing for the AMA to handle.

These crimes involving every citizen, our national welfare—physical and mental—are for Veterans' Administrator Gray and our Department of Justice to handle.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Proposed "Defense Union"

BOTH MR. Baruch and Mr. Dulles have told Congress this week that economic revival in Europe requires a guaranty against the danger of aggression. They are agreed that a regional defense pact is the way to achieve this guaranty. Mr. Baruch would have "the countries of Europe—as many as are willing—band themselves into a political, economic and defense union under the United Nations" and he would have "the United States, and such others as will join us . . . guarantee . . . to go to war in joint defense if any of them are attacked."

Lippmann

There are, I venture to think, strong reasons for doubting whether this is a sound and practical way to achieve what is undoubtedly an urgent and desirable result: namely to make certain that the masters of the Kremlin know that they must encounter the military power of the United States if they attempted military aggression. My own view is that this proposed pact would not unite western Europe but would divide it even more deeply than it is today, that it would not strengthen but would weaken the security of western Europe.

IT IS, to begin with, self-evident that the only countries which could join such a defense union would be the 16 participating in the Marshall Plan. But in fact not all of them could or would join. It is certain that Switzerland would not; her constitution prevents it. It is almost as certain that Sweden would not. Thus at the outset the cooperating nations would be divided into two groups—those within the military alliance and the neutrals outside it.

This discloses the fallacy of the proposal. For supposing a country refuses to join the regional pact, would that mean that we would not defend it if it were attacked? Obviously Mr. Baruch does not mean that the non-joiners will not be entitled to be defended. That would be tantamount to saying that it is not a vital interest of ours to prevent aggression except against those nations which have first signed up. There it merely complicates our problem and the difficulties of the European nations to ask them to sign up as a pre-condition of the guaranty. For the crux of the matter is that the guaranty is necessary whether or not they sign up.

NOBODY knows how many countries would in fact be willing to sign up. But we may be sure of one thing and that is that no country could afford to join such a regional pact without first obtaining from us a firm commitment, not only, as Mr. Baruch suggests, of our readiness to go to war, but also of our willingness to build up the armaments and to defend the territory of each and every one of them. For under this plan, if, for example, Greece or Turkey were attacked, then Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, France and Italy would automatically be at war too. They would be obligated to go to the defense of Turkey or Greece. What they will want to know is whether and how they are going to be defended while they are defending Turkey and Greece.

I think it is a reasonably safe guess that most of them would in fact refuse to sign up. Those that were willing to sign up would be bound to demand that in addition to civilian aid under the Marshall Plan they be given fabulously expensive military aid under a revival of lend lease. For this "defense union" would not increase their security; on the contrary it would increase their obligations, entangling them automatically in every conflict, denying them the chance to remain neutral, and exposing them to reprisal and occupation.

IT WOULD BE far better, it seems to me, for the United States to deal directly with the Soviet Union in this matter—operating not on the principle of collective security but on that of the balance of power.

That would mean the building up of our own military capacity to reply to any military aggression by direct and sustained assault, and along with it a thorough explanation in Moscow, Belgrade and Warsaw that we shall permit no advance beyond the present lines held by the Soviet Army; and that we shall increase our military striking power until there are peace treaties which agree to the withdrawal of all the non-European armies from the European continent.

IF THE United States cannot convince the Kremlin, then to add the signatures of a dozen weak European governments to another pact, will not convince the Kremlin. What advantage, then, is there in subjecting our friends in western Europe—and the United Nations as a whole—to the cruel ordeal of having to decide formally and publicly whether they will defy the Soviet Union in order to qualify for our guaranty? Few of them can add any material force to the guaranty. Yet the bitter internal controversies which this proposal would arouse could only divert their attention from the task of economic reconstruction and reunion in Europe.

IT HAS BEEN said in support of the proposal that it would be on the model of the inter-American agreement at Rio de Janeiro. The analogy is, I submit, quite false. The inter-American agreement embraces all the American republics, and none in signing it was, therefore, joining a military alliance with one great military power opposed to its neighbors allied with another great military power. But that is just what a western European defense union would call for.

The real effect of injecting into western Europe the issues which this proposal raises would be to undermine the foundations of the Marshall Plan. It would submerge economic cooperation under the military alliance, and would confirm the most serious charge which the Communists, and not only the Communists, make against the Marshall Plan.

Yet that plan, as Secretary Marshall has said several times and ought now to say again, is designed to draw Europe together, not to divide it, and it is accentuated and crystallized.

Petrillo Says Recording Ban May Be Eased

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

James Caesar Petrillo's decision to ban phonograph record-making "forever and ever" doesn't necessarily mean always, the musicians' czar told a congressional committee yesterday.

Testifying before the House Labor Committee, Petrillo explained that "at the moment, we say 'forever,'" but that his American Federation of Musicians union might change its mind.

And earlier, he had retreated from the "forever and ever" position by at least 80 per cent. He said he was perfectly willing for union members to make all recordings for home use—some 80 per cent of the total—without demanding any royalty fee whatsoever.

Vows to "Fight It Out"

For the other 20 per cent, used commercially by radio stations and in juke boxes, he proposed to "fight it out" with the industries concerned.

Petrillo also hinted strongly that he would reach a settlement in current contract negotiations with the major radio networks, whose contracts with the AFM expire at the end of this month.

The sticking point in negotiations has been Petrillo's refusal to let live musicians appear on FM (frequency modulation) and television programs. But yesterday he told Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.), a card-carrying member of the union, that he was keeping "an open mind" on these questions.

"That's the best news we've heard in a long time," Kearns said.

Confident of Agreement

"Don't grab so fast," Petrillo replied. But later he said he was "very confident" of an agreeable settlement of the contract negotiations.

Volatile, unrestrained and disarmingly frank, Petrillo appeared as a witness before the committee which is considering whether new legislation is necessary because of the union's ban against record-making and its refusal to permit members on FM and television programs.

Refusal or not, Petrillo himself was televised yesterday to a fare-thee-well. He appeared under a battery of klieg lights and before a barricade of microphones. His performance was such that no union member could complain of lack of entertainment quality.

He agreed with committee Chairman Hartley (R., N. J.) to "make a deal"—his favorite expression—on a secret election among musicians to see if they supported the prohibition against recordings. But he wanted the poll to be taken among all members.

Hartley said: "I'll include everyone who ever made a record."

"The dead ones we can't dig up," Petrillo lamented.

Hartley complained the AFM refused to permit a New Jersey high school band to appear in a parade.

The reason, Petrillo explained, was that they weren't amateurs, but were competing, at cut rates, with professional bands.

"The building trades wouldn't let a Boy Scout plumber go to work at $1 an hour," he said.

Back to the Main Theme

Again and again Petrillo returned to his main theme: Radio stations and juke boxes, using recordings made by a few musicians, have cost the jobs of many more musicians. Why, he demanded, should the musicians be asked to make recordings which would put themselves out of business?

Nobody can stop progress, he agreed, but the musicians should not be asked to "play at our own funeral."

"Did the icemen invent the refrigerator?" he asked.

"Won't someone worry about the musicians?" he pleaded. "Can't some of you help us. We don't want to destroy anything. But we're being destroyed. All we're asking is do we live or don't we live at our chosen profession?"

CIO Officers Back Murray Against Leftists

CIO vice presidents, meeting here yesterday, were said to have backed President Philip Murray in a determined policy to stop the union's left-wingers from supporting the presidential candidacy of Henry A. Wallace.

At CIO headquarters here it was an open secret that a recommendation would be issued that all CIO affiliates take a uniform position against a third party.

The policy recommendation will be submitted to the CIO executive board today. Tomorrow it will presumably be the basis of discussion for the CIO Political Action Committee's executive board meeting.

Despite the action here, in New York one faction of the CIO National Maritime Union yesterday announced its support for Wallace. But a union officer denounced the group as "Communist controlled."

NMU National Secretary Ferdinand C. Smith said at a news conference that 19 of some 30 members of the NMU national council and 74 of approximately 100 union officials favored Wallace and a third party movement.

Immediately after the news conference NMU Treasurer Hedley Stone termed Smith's statement "an underhanded action, taken in the absence of President Joe Curran."

"The 74 officials mentioned in this statement speak only for themselves," Stone told newsmen who called on him. "They have followed a direct party line."

Yale Professor Quits PCA Board

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 21 (AP).—Dr. John P. Peters, professor of internal medicine at Yale University, said today that he has resigned as vice chairman of the national board of directors of the Progressive Citizens of America, because, he declared, "the PCA is in no position to assume the responsibility for a national third party ticket in the coming election."

The PCA recently voted to back Henry A. Wallace's candidacy for President on a third party ticket.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Third-Round Doubts

WHEN A politician talks to a trade-union convention, he is expected to say the things that labor wants to hear. He is not expected to challenge the ancient trade-union rule of thumb that higher wages must inevitably mean better living for the worker and his family.

Childs

But that is just what Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon did the other day when he talked to a convention of the CIO International Woodworkers of the Pacific Northwest. This hard-boiled union was already critical of Morse. Yet the ebullient Senator from Oregon led off with a challenge of the whole union wage approach in this period of spiraling inflation. He told them he believed in saying the same thing to every kind of audience and therefore he was going to let them have it.

In the second round of wage increases they had got a boost of 18½ cents an hour, he pointed out. Yet he defied anyone in the audience to prove that this had meant more than a net gain of 2 cents an hour in real purchasing power. The balance was absorbed by prices that had jumped up in immediate response to higher wages.

The third round will not mean even 2 cents an hour in net gain, said Morse, so sensitive are prices today. This was not welcome news. But as Morse discovered later in talking with union leaders, it touched a doubt that they themselves had long harbored.

This doubt is widespread among responsible trade-union leaders. They are not sure but that a third round of wage increases will do their own members more harm than good. They feel they have come down a blind alley.

ONE THING that gives them pause is the fact that industry, beneath a surface show of resistance, is apparently quite willing to grant the next round. While there may be real resistance in some industries, it will be largely sham.

The reason, as trade-union leaders suspect, is that business does not want to interfere with the present ratio of phenomenal profits. The additional cost in wages will be added to the bill of the consumer, who will pay still higher prices.

Of course, this does not apply to all industry. There have been examples of remarkable industrial statesmanship, such as the action of General Electric in reducing prices in the face of the current trend. While it could hardly be called a major reduction, at least it was a move in the right direction.

Reports of phenomenal profits are the red rag to the labor bull. Thus the Woodworkers had been told that profits in the lumber industry were 40 per cent after taxes. The accuracy of this figure is irrelevant, since it had become an article of faith with the men who work in the forests.

The Department of Agriculture reported that profits of food-distributing chains were at the highest point since the boom of the 20's. Even here, where the margin is customarily small, the figures are surprising. Some of the larger chains increased their profit ratio after Federal taxes from 8 per cent in 1945 to 18.3 per cent in 1946.

RESPONDING automatically, every trade-union leader demands more wages. He demands that the wage increases be paid out of these profits, although he must know that there is no way to compel business to do that, just as there is no way to prevent increased wage costs being passed along to the consumer.

But those who look beyond the automatic cry for higher wages are beginning to ask some unhappy questions. They are beginning to wonder whether perhaps the postwar policy of the unions has been mistaken in its simple and undeviating goal of more pay in the wage envelope.

There are those who have suggested from the sidelines that it might be better to work for long-term goals, such as a guaranteed annual wage, rather than for increases that vanish in the ever-mounting flame of inflation. Some unions, conspicuously the United Automobile Workers, have included such gains as paid vacations in their demands.

The General Motors Division of UAW has just voted to forego 10 cents of its forthcoming 30-cents-an-hour demand if the company will present an "acceptable pension plan." That is a small example of common sense. A pension plan would not be so immediately and directly inflationary and its long-term effect would be on the side of stability.

The third round can do much greater damage than the second wage boost. That should be a sobering consideration in all union councils these days.

Expediter Urges Tax Relief To Spur New Rental Housing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A plan to give an immediate stimulus to the building of rental property by allowing a special Federal tax reduction over the next five years was outlined to Congress yesterday by Tighe Woods, Housing Expediter.

Testifying before the Joint Committee on Housing, Woods had his first meeting with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy since the Wisconsin Republican demanded that Woods resign.

When Woods took the witness stand, McCarthy immediately launched into the reasons why he had called for the Housing Expediter's resignation.

Local rent-control boards all over the United States had complained, McCarthy said, that they were being overruled by Woods and that the Housing Expediter was a "dictator" flouting the intent of Congress to permit local boards to make decisions.

Woods, a former real estate operator from Chicago, grinned amiably and said he would be glad to answer the criticism.

The main trouble is, he said, that the language of the rent control law enacted by Congress is fuzzy. He agreed to help draft language in the new rent control bill to spell out some standards, and to make it clear that the authority to follow the standards would be in the hands of local boards.

Woods warned that experts believe the cost of labor and materials will continue at present levels for the next five years. He added a warning, also, that when the full impact of the Marshall Plan is felt next year, certain shortages, such as soil pipe, will be aggravated. Multiple-family dwellings, he noted, can be erected at considerable saving in critical materials, over single-family houses.

In order to overcome the reluctance of private capital to invest in rental housing, Woods proposed what he called a system of "accelerated depreciation," by which the investor would recover his excess building costs in five years.

The Housing Expediter, he said, would recommend to the Treasury Department that the investor is entitled to a certificate of necessity for that portion of his investment which represents "water" or inflated costs.

Property built under these certificates would thus depreciate faster for the purposes of taxation.

Woods said he had worked out with the representative of a large insurance company just how his plan would operate on a project of 164 apartments ranging in size from 4½ to 6 rooms at rentals of $20 per room or less per month, with construction cost of buildings and land not to exceed $2000 per room.

"This insurance company," he said, "stated that if this type of financing were made available by the Government, it had several million dollars of building plans in the blueprint stage which would immediately become realities."

Publisher Says Eisenhower May Refuse to Run

Kansas City, Jan. 21 (AP).—Roy A. Roberts, president of the Kansas City Star, predicted today that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower shortly may remove himself from consideration as a possible candidate for the Presidency.

"I'll venture a guess that before June the General may take himself completely out of the political picture," Roberts said in a speech before Chamber of Commerce here.

"I am sure the message will not come before he lays aside his military uniform February 15."

Roberts made it plain he was not talking for Eisenhower.

Calif. Jap Policy Under Fire Anew

High Court Gets Fish License Appeal Of Man Who Sent 4 of Family to Army

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

California's anti-Japanese policy came under new fire in the Supreme Court yesterday.

Torao Takahashi, who sent four of his family into our armies during the war, asked the court to make California give him a fishing license. He claims the California law denying licenses to "aliens ineligible to citizenship"—that is, to Japanese—is against the Constitution.

Last Monday the court refused to outlaw the California law that says aliens who cannot be citizens shall not own land in the State. However, the court pulled some of the teeth of this law, which counsel for the State said openly was part of the anti-Japanese policy.

Three Washington lawyers—Dean Acheson, Charles A. Horsky and Ernest W. Jennes—were among Takahashi's counsel. They told the Supreme Court that Takahashi was born in Japan, but came to America more than 40 years ago. He was a deep-sea fisherman until the war broke out.

Then Takahashi went to an internment camp, and his two sons and two sons-in-law went into the Army. Three of them served overseas, one got the Purple Heart, with oak leaf cluster.

When Takahashi was turned loose in 1945 he asked for a new fishing license, so he could go back to his old business. There was a new law, and he was turned down, so he went to court.

The Los Angeles courts upheld Takahashi, but the State Supreme Court said—four to three—that the anti-Japanese fishing law was a reasonable rule to carry out the conservation policy of the State.

Takahashi's counsel say the State is conserving something that does not belong to it because the fish in the ocean belong to the Federal Government and are not subject to State rules. They said also that the California policy denied the Japanese the equal protection of the laws, which the fourteenth amendment says all men must have.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—Cotton futures broke more than $3 a bale on a wave of liquidation which developed in late dealings today. Losses were accentuated by stop-loss selling with final prices 25 cents to $3.40 a bale lower.

Traders attributed the break to growing sentiment that it will be some time before the Marshall foreign aid program will be implemented.

U. S. Would Bar Theaters Of Producers

The Justice Department yesterday asked the Supreme Court to order five big movie producers to sell their holdings in theaters all over the country.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman told the court that the tie-up between movie making and movie showing was a monopoly which strangled the business chances of independent movie owners. His brief was filed in an antitrust suit against the five producers, which began nearly 10 years ago.

The appeal is due to be argued for 9½ hours, starting on February 9.

The film companies are Warner Brothers, which has 22 theaters here; Loew's, which has 3; RKO which has one; Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount. In all, the five firms own 3137 theaters in this country.

COMPARED TO 1941 (biggest pre-war year):

30,000,000 motorists are using ..... 2,500,000,000 more gallons than in '41

Armed forces are using ..... 3,500,000,000 more gallons than in '41
Railroads, airlines and ships are using ..... 2,500,000,000 more gallons than in '41
Farmers are using ..... 1,500,000,000 more gallons than in '41
Industry is using (for heat, power, lubrication) ..... 2,000,000,000 more gallons than in '41

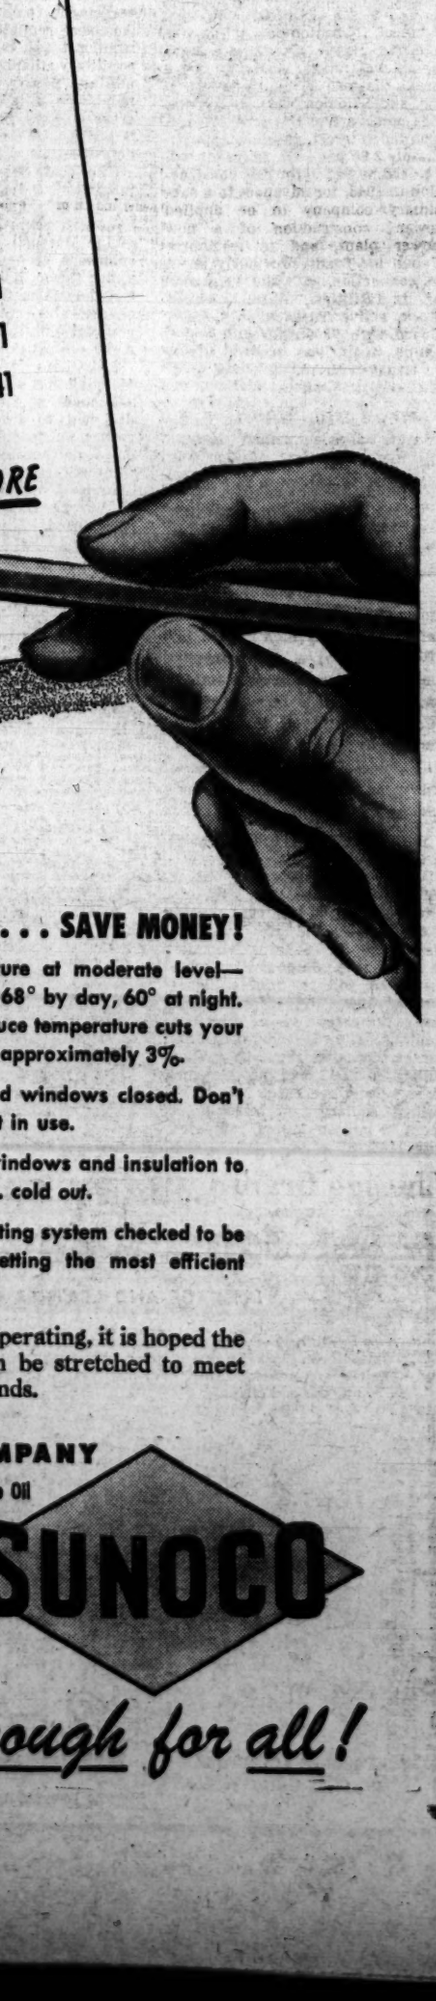
INCREASED DEMAND FOR OIL PRODUCTS 20,000,000,000 GALLONS MORE THAN BIGGEST PRE-WAR YEAR...
7,000,000,000 MORE THAN BIGGEST WAR YEAR!



What about the oil supply? What's being done about it? Those are fair questions which deserve straight answers!

The supply is GREAT . . . but the demand is GREATER!

More fuel oil, more gasoline, more petroleum products of all kinds are being produced today than at any time during or before the war. But the demand for them is rising still faster!

Since the war, over a million homes have installed new oil burners. That alone increases the demand for oil by over 2½ billion gallons a year! There are more automobiles, too, and they're being driven more miles; more trucks and busses, more tractors, more airplanes, more diesel engines.

MORE people are using MORE oil for MORE purposes than ever before!

WHY? Because home owners and factories alike prefer this clean, labor-saving, space-saving, modern fuel! And because oil prices have not advanced as much as the prices of some other fuels.

Here's what we are doing about it!

Sun Oil Company is working twenty-four hours a day, at breakneck speed, producing the greatest volume of oil products in its history. And as fast as they're produced, they're being rushed to our customers.

In addition, we are drilling more wells, seeking new sources of crude, buying more tankships, building more refinery equipment to increase our production, refining and transportation facilities.

Here's how YOU can help!

Don't waste petroleum products! Make every gallon count. In your home, in your car, make sure you get maximum efficiency from the oil products you use. You fuel oil users, particularly, can help stretch the available supply—and save money on your fuel bills, too.

SAVE FUEL OIL . . . SAVE MONEY!

1. Keep temperature at moderate level—not more than 68° by day, 60° at night. Each degree you reduce temperature cuts your fuel oil consumption approximately 3%.
2. Keep doors and windows closed. Don't heat rooms not in use.
3. Install storm windows and insulation to keep heat in . . . cold out.
4. Have your heating system checked to be sure you're getting the most efficient use of your fuel oil.

With everyone cooperating, it is hoped the current supply can be stretched to meet today's peak demands.

Riggs' Net Off, But Still Near 111-Year Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Riggs National Bank reported net operating earnings of $1,418,826 for 1947, equal to $28.38 a share.

In the annual report to stockholders President Robert V. Fleming stated that although the net was not as great as in 1946 it exceeded the income for any other year in the bank's 111-year history.

Net operating earnings in 1946 were $1,519,818, or $30.40 a share.

Fleming said that a sharp drop in the Treasury's war loan deposit account was the principal factor in the 1947 earning dip. Other factors were rising operating and payroll costs.

Riggs' loans increased to $55,448,885, a gain of about 58 per cent over the previous year.

Capital, surplus, undivided profits and reserves reached a new record of $16,577,323 at the end of 1947. The bank now has 100,264 commercial and savings accounts, a gain of 1135 accounts for the year.

Commenting on the general situation, Fleming declared:

"In our own country, production has reached the highest level of all time and the annual national income has increased to over 200 billion dollars; yet we are still faced with a shortage in materials as well as labor . . . demands of the world for our products and services continue to mount . . .

"Only through greater production can the wants and the needs of our own people and of the world be satisfied and inflation be curbed. Greater production can reduce the cost of living at home, improve the standard of living of the sorely tried peoples abroad and check the spread of communism."

OVERSUBSCRIBED: The public offering of 13,790 shares of Washington Gas Light Co. common stock at 20¼ was reported heavily oversubscribed. This portion of the original 85,000 shares offered to old stockholders was sold after the close of the market Tuesday. The bonds are priced at 100.99 and accrued interest, to yield approximately 2.95 per cent. Proceeds will be used by Pepco for new construction in 1948, for advances to a subsidiary company to be applied toward construction of a new power plant, and to reimburse Pepco for funds previously spent in connection with the expansion of its facilities. Pepco common stock, active Tuesday on the Big Board with 7300 shares changing hands, again was traded briskly yesterday with 10,900 shares sold. It closed at 13, off ⅛.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: S. P. Brown has been named personnel manager for United Air Lines at Washington and eight other Eastern cities . . . Ralph L. Preble has been appointed Washington district passenger agent of Missouri Pacific Lines . . . Claude Mahoney, radio journalist, will address members of the Bank Women's Club of Washington at a dinner meeting Tuesday in the Dodge Hotel. Anne Sullivan of Union Trust Co. will preside . . . Edwin C. Barringer of Washington has been elected executive vice president of the Institute of Iron Scrap and Steel.

B. & O. ESTIMATES: Baltimore & Ohio Railroad yesterday reported operating revenues of about 360 million dollars in 1947, approximately 55 million dollars more than in the previous year. Net income for 1947 was estimated at nearly nine million dollars, more than four million dollars higher than in 1946. The tentative figures, presented at a directors' meeting, showed operating expenses increased about 25 million dollars in 1947 and net revenue from railway operations totaled 59 million dollars, an increase of about 29 million dollars, compared with 1946.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 21 (AP).—Despite a late selloff concentrated mainly on wheat, grains closed steady to more than a cent higher on the Board of Trade today. Final prices, however, were down more than 2 cents from the day's best levels.

A good demand for cash corn supported the market early and the yellow cereal jumped to within a short distance of seasonal highs. This aided wheat and oats. Late selling in wheat, which eventually spread to other grains, was based on information that the Government does not have much more wheat to purchase to meet export allocations.

Wheat ended ¾ lower to 1 cent higher. May, 2.99½@2.99¾; corn was unchanged to 2⅛ higher, May, 2.67¾@2.68; oats were ¼ to 2⅝ higher, May, 1.28½@1.28⅝ and soybeans were 2 to 6 cents higher, March, 4.22½@4.22.

Chandler Moves to Reinstate Jumpers to Mexico

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

JACK KRAMER has not quite made good his ghosted boast in a fifty-cent magazine some time back that he'd blast little Bobby Riggs off the court when they met as pros. Tonight at Uline Arena, Kramer will be struggling to pull even in their series, which now finds Riggs leading, 9—8, and still looking like the best tennis player in the world.

POVICH

With that latter rating, Riggs never has quarreled. Bobby never did lack for complete faith in himself, even to the point of betting $10,000 on Bobby Riggs to lick Don Budge in their 25-match tour last year. He cashed that bet and went on to take the undisputed professional tennis title from Budge and a big field in the national tournament at Forest Hills.

Riggs never did look as if he belonged at the top of professional tennis; at least according to the popular conception of what a tennis champ should look like physically. He isn't big, he isn't tall, he isn't lithe and he's not temperamental. He only weighs 165 pounds, he doesn't top five feet nine, and he's waddle-footed. His only boast is that he has licked 'em all.

KRAMER has been the favorite of the galleries on their present tour, ever since he took the $50,000 and turned pro—That's understandable. In contrast to the chunky, grim-visaged Riggs, Kramer is tall, blond, handsome and stacked facially and physically like the picture of the All-American boy. It seems, however, that a tennis ball doesn't know the difference.

Riggs has met the Kramer type before, notably big freckled Don Budge who had the same kind of vicious serve and smashing forehand but somehow Bobby never appeared at a great disadvantage. If their volleys and smashes are spectacular, so is Riggs' court-covering game and his ability to get the ball back. There's doubt if a greater defensive player ever lived.

Right now, Riggs is amazing the tennis people by leading Kramer in the series on indoor courts. The fast boards favor Kramer's smashing game and he has shots that are unreturnable, but Riggs is still winning and, as Bobby says, "wait till I get him outside on the clay and grass courts."

WITH RIGGS, the gallery is just a lot of people who pay their way into his matches and make it a profitable business. His showmanship starts and ends with the tennis he plays, and his only concern is the guy on the other side of the court. Kramer can wave and bow to the crowd and get the cheers. Riggs is more impressed with retaining his pro title which he says is worth $50,000 a year to him.

Bobby has a nice set of psychological strokes to go along with his tennis. On a hot day at Forest Hills a few years back, he appeared in a long-sleeves woolen sweater in disdain of the heat, refused to discard it at any point during the match, and romped to a four-set victory over his perspiring opponent who was playing in shorts.

When he beat Budge last year in the pro tennis finals, Riggs was supposed to be pitting his defensive game against Budge's fierce smashes. But from the start of the match Riggs unveiled a new blistering serve and went into Budge's own volleying act with such exasperating steadiness that Budge became so demoralized he served three double faults in one game. Riggs ran out the set, 6—3, 6—1, 6—1.

RIGGS is proud of his ability to stand off the big guys who want to blast him off the court, and he can sneer pretty good after making one of his spectacular saves. He was playing a big Czech pro in Boston a couple of years back on the Longwood courts and Riggs barely got a hard smash back into the court with a high lob, an easy kill for his opponent.

The big guy did kill it with a powerful smash and then he, the gallery and the press box were amazed to see the shot returned. Riggs had scrambled up the chicken wire fence in back of the court, and from 6 feet off the ground, smashed the ball back into play. It was a foul, of course, and didn't count, but Bobby was merely showing 'em he could do it.

One thing Kramer has achieved on this tour. He has smoked Riggs out of his defensive game and made him go to the net. The fast boards dictated that strategy for Bobby, but for Kramer it was merely the discouraging discovery that Riggs can play the net, too, if he chooses.

Uline Arena Removes Ban On Negroes, Effective at Once

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Uline Arena has abandoned a seven-year-old racial policy and the Arena hereafter will be open to Negroes for all events.

The action, announced yesterday by M. J. Uline, Arena owner, became effective with last night's St. Louis-Washington Cap basketball game.

Heretofore, Negroes were admitted only to boxing matches.

"The trend of the times prompted my decision," Uline said. He added that poor attendance at Arena-sponsored events also was a major factor.

"Negroes will be as welcome as anyone else," Uline said. "There will be no segregation and they will receive the same attention as other spectators.

"We are happy to have them for all events which the Arena sponsors — professional basketball, hockey, ice shows, tennis matches, rodeos, etc. They may also rent the Arena for their own private functions."

Uline said he "didn't know" whether Negroes would be permitted to participate in the public ice skating classes on Sundays since "most of the skating done is by private clubs who rent the Arena for that afternoon."

The arena owner stated he has been contemplating a change of policy for over a year, but waited until "there was no pressure on me" before making a change. He was referring to the pickets who paraded in front of the arena on fight nights urging Negroes not to attend the fights until the arena junked its racial policy.

In the very near future, Uline added, he hoped to have the Washington Bears, local Negro professional basketball team, play the Rens, Globe Trotters and other prominent Negro pro teams, in preliminaries to the Cap games.

Schools Interested

Dr. E. B. Henderson, director of athletics for Negro high schools, and Edward Jackson, athletic director at Howard University, both said last night they were definitely interested in using Uline Arena for basketball games. Negro interhigh and college games are played before turn-away crowds at Turner's Arena, which seats less than 2000 for basketball in contrast to Uline's 7000.

At his press conference yesterday, the elderly arena owner also reiterated a previous threat to turn his place into a cold storage plant April 15 "if the National Guard Armory is permitted to operate in competition with me. I cannot stand Government competition. They can undersell me 80 per cent and I'm getting out when the getting out is good."

If attendance at his various events picks up considerably because of the new policy, he may reconsider, he added.

Graziano Fight Now May Be Held At Uline Arena

Middleweight Champ Rocky Graziano's Washington bout, slated for mid-March, probably will be held at Uline's in view of the arena's decision to admit Negroes to all events, Promoter Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club, said last night.

Ahearn, whose club will promote Graziano's appearance here, said he and his New York "agent," Al Weill, will confer Friday and probably announce an opponent, date and site for the bout over the weekend.

Liberty A.C. used Uline's for most of its winter productions, but abandoned the 3d and M sts. site a year ago over the racial issue.

Caps Beat St. Louis by 81-74, Take 2d Place

The Washington Capitols climbed into second place in the Basketball Association of America's Western Division tonight, replacing the St. Louis Bombers whom they defeated, 81-74, at Uline Arena, before 3025 fans.

The lead changed hands five times in the first few moments of the game, but the Caps claimed it midway the quarter and held on the rest of the way, despite three Bomber spurts after halftime.

Washington led, 42-38, at halftime.

Caps Take Halftime Lead

After the lead had changed hands four times in the early skirmishing, the Caps vaulted into the lead at the midway point of the opening period and stayed there, holding a 42-38 half-time advantage.

Johnny Norlander paced the first period Washington attack with seven points while Don Logan kept the Bombers in the ball game. With Norlander and Johnny Manhken hitting, the Caps paraded into a 21-13 lead at the end of the first period.

The Bombers who had shown no signs of making a close game of it came to life late in the second period when Logan got a hot hand and pulled his team up within three points of the Caps.

With Norlander contributing his fine offensive play, the Caps increased their lead to six points in the third period, being out in front 62-56, as the stretch quarter opened.

Norlander, being fed nicely by Feerick and Mahnken, dumped in six points, four in a row which halted a brief Bomber rally early in the period. The Bombers, however, still threatened with Belus, Smawley and Logan doing their best to erase the St. Louis deficit.

Pellagrini, his brother Robert, and his brother-in-law, Wilfred C. Bushee, were charged with assaulting his landlady and her two sons when they protested leaking water from the Pellagrini apartment.

Pellagrini, former Boston Red Sox infielder, was recently traded to the St. Louis Browns.

Conerly Refused $100,000 Bid, Rickey Says

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP).—Branch Rickey, who recently took over Brooklyn's football Dodgers, said today Charley Conerly, the Mississippi passing ace, had turned down a $100,000 Dodger bid for his services in ofder to play for the New York Giants of the rival National League.

Rickey disclosed at a press conference that he had offered Conerly a contract calling for $20,000 a year for four years and a $20,000 bonus.

"But he is going to play with the Giants," the head man of the All-America Conference club said. "I think he is under a commitment in which the boy has no choice."

The Giants only yesterday obtained draft rights to the Mississippi passing star in a trade with the Washington Redskins.

"We made Conerly an offer the likes of which I've never made a baseball player in my life," Rickey added.

He said if the Ole Miss star weren't under commitment "he couldn't have afforded to turn us down." He didn't elaborate on the commitment.

Conerly completed 133 of 233 passes for Mississippi this year for a 57.1 percentage that broke existing college records.

Explaining how the Dodgers lost out to the Washington Redskins in landing Harry Gilmer, the Alabama throwing specialist, Rickey remarked simply "we arrived on the scene too late."

Wellington Mara, secretary of the Giants, said his club had not yet signed Conerly and added: "Furthermore, we don't pay money like that Mr. Rickey speaks about."

Mara said he knew of no commitment that would force Conerly to play with the Giants. "I think the boy is just taking a long-range view and figures the National League offers more security," he added.

Grid Bums Pick Voyles As Coach

Brooklyn, Jan. 21 (AP).—Carl Voyles, former grid coach at Auburn and William and Mary, was named head coach of the Brooklyn Football Dodgers today by Branch Rickey, who recently took over the All-America Conference club.

Voyles stepped out recently as head coach and athletic director at Auburn, having moved there in 1944 from William and Mary where his 1942 team won the Southern Conference championship.

Auburn won only two games during the past season and his contract was terminated by mutual agreement although it still had two more years to run.

Rickey said the contract was for one year but no salary was disclosed. Voyles succeeds Cliff Battles, who was swept out in the recent Dodger turnover.

A native of McCloud, Okla., Voyles served as assistant coach at Illinois from 1925 to 1931 and was an aide to Wallace Wade at Duke from 1931 to 1938. He became head coach at William and Mary in 1939.

Voyles' all-time college head-coaching record shows 75 victories, 29 defeats and three ties.

Auburn Names Brown

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 21 (AP).—Acting President Ralph Draughon announced tonight appointment of Earl M. Brown, former Notre Dame star, as head football coach at Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn).

Brown, 52 and coach at Canisius College, Buffalo, succeeds Carl M. Voyles, whose contract was bought up by the school early in December.

Niland Mentioned

Erie, Pa., Jan. 21 (AP).—Joe Niland, basketball coach at Gannon College here, said tonight he would "neither confirm nor deny" reports he would succeed Earl Brown as cage mentor at Canisius College next season.

Reserve Clause Battle Resumes Today in Boston

Boston, Jan. 21 (AP).—Describing the reserve clause as the "backbone of baseball," Dixie Walker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, tonight joined forces with former pitching star Johnny Murphy, now a Boston Red Sox scout, to represent their sport at a legislative hearing tomorrow at the State House.

They will be spokesmen for the players in their respective leagues in opposing a bill submitted by Robert Murphy, Boston labor relations counsel, which would outlaw the reserve clause in the contracts of professional athletes employed by Massachusetts organizations.

Walker, recently traded by the pennant winning Brooklyn Dodgers, pointed out several recent concessions—the pension plan especially—that club owners have made to improve working conditions for players.

"If it were not for the reserve clause, all players would become free agents at the end of each season. In no time, the richest clubs would have all of the most skilful players. That would stifle competition and destroy baseball," Murphy said.

Kramer Plays Riggs Tonight In 18th Match

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

The two top tennis players in the world, Bobby Riggs and Jack Kramer will continue their hotly contested Nation-wide series tonight at Uline Arena.

The blond, burr-headed Kramer compiled a great record in the amateur ranks, winning the Wimbledon singles, our own national championship and leading the United States Davis Cup Team to a landslide victory over Australia before he turned pro this winter.

A former Wimbledon and United States National champion himself, Riggs found little opposition in the pro ranks until the recent coming of Kramer.

Segura Meets Pails

Opening tonight's program will be a singles encounter between Pancho Segura and Dinny Pails. Segura, a pigeon-toed little Latin from Ecuador, who bangs the ball like a baseball player smacking line drives, was three times United States intercollegiate singles titleholder and once held the United States indoor championship.

Pails, the Australian singles king, is best known by American fans as the man who almost beat Ted Schroeder in the Davis Cup singles last year.

The four players will team up to play an exhibition doubles match following the feature singles encounter. The first match is scheduled for 8:30 p. m.

Rodenberg Chief Owner Now

Maury Nee, Corby Dispose of Stock in Baltimore Colts

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Maury Nee and Karl Corby, local businessmen, announced yesterday they have sold their financial interests in the Baltimore Colts to President Bob Rodenberg.

Disposal of their stock gives Rodenberg controlling interest in the All-American Conference football franchise.

Nee said their decision was prompted by business pressure. "We can't devote the time to our business and the Colts, too," he explained.

Baltimore, doormat of the Eastern division, won only 2 of 12 games and lost more than $150,000 last season.

As a parting shot, Nee said he felt that the attitude of George Marshall, president of the Washington Redskins of the rival National Football League, "has hindered the progress of professional football."

Nee's reference in particular was to Marshall's opposition to a world series of pro football between the All-American Conference and National League winners.

"But I think that such a series will materialize in a couple of years anyway," Nee said.

Rodenberg confirmed announcement of the withdrawal of Nee and Corby, but insisted the Colts still were on a firm financial standing.

Amount of stock the two held wasn't disclosed, but Rodenberg admitted that they sold at a loss.

Although Bob Rodenberg now is the major stockholder of the Colts, his brother, Bill, and Herbert Bryant, Charles P. McCormick, Albert E. Whettle and Robert C. Embry still hold shares.

Don Faurot 'Felt Out' for Job at Navy

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Don Faurot, University of Missouri, and four or five other coaches have been "felt out" by the Naval Academy in its quest of a new head football coach.

Faurot is the No. 1 choice of a committee of Navy officers assigned the task of selecting a civilian to succeed Capt. Tom Hamilton, who becomes director of athletics in June.

This committee has been active the past few days contacting desirable prospects.

Faurot, reached by telephone at Kansas City, Mo., declined to say whether he has or has not discussed with academy officials the possibility of taking the Annapolis job.

It was learned from other sources, however, that academy officials have communicated with Faurot.

A definite indication as to whether Faurot is seriously interested in the Navy job is expected within a few days.

Also well up in the running was Edward J. Erdlatz, highly regarded end coach for the Navy.

Erdlatz has a background of civilian football, having played and coached at St. Mary's College in California.

Navy's ends under Erdlatz have been among the best in the Nation, including Dick Duden, Leon Bramlett, Art Markel and Phil Ryan.

Driskill Called To Colorado

Walter Driskill, athletic director and assistant football coach at University of Maryland, will go to Boulder, Colo., next Wednesday to be interviewed for the head coaching job at the University of Colorado, his alma mater.

Colorado officials summoned Driskill yesterday. In addition to his duties as athletic director, Driskill helps coach the Maryland line. He served as an assistant to his present head coach, Jim Tatum, at Oklahoma last year.

Driskill, a standout tackle at Colorado, was an assistant coach at his alma mater for four years prior to accepting an assistant coaching job at Wyoming in 1941. He enrolled in the Navy the following year.

Driskill is the fifth of about 100 applicants to receive an invitation. Dudley DeGroot, former coach of the Los Angeles Dons, has been interviewed and left town. James Glassford, University of New Hampshire coach is expected in late today and will be followed by Carl Voyles, former top coach at Alabama Polytech and at William and Mary, and Dallas Ward, backfield coach at Minnesota.

Assistant's Trip South Regarded as Peace Feeler

By Claude Wolff

Cincinnati, Jan. 21 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler and organized baseball are ready to make peace with the Mexican League and welcome back the many stars who jumped their teams for higher pay across the border in 1946, it was learned today.

The commissioner himself would make no statement, but from a source close to him it was said the purpose of a scheduled conference between Walter Mulbry, secretary of baseball, and Alejandro Aguilar Reyes, Mexican League Commission, "is obvious."

Mulbry is in Mexico City for a combined vacation-business visit. He said there earlier today that "some time in the future it might not be impossible to have a fine spirit of coopeartion between organized baseball in the United States and the Mexican Baseball League."

From an unquestionable source it was learned here that Chandler personally believes that if peace could be restored, it would be a good thing for baseball.

Appears in Command

And the commissioner, after a shaky start as head man of baseball in the United States, has gone about having his own way.

Chandler also believes that the stars who jumped the major and minor leagues and subsequently were suspended for five years, probably will have paid their debt to baseball society by the time the current truce becomes a real peace, and should be given back their jobs, the source disclosed.

Among the great players who were lured into the Mexican League were Pitchers Max Lanier and Fred Martin and Second Baseman Lou Klein of the St. Louis Cardinals; Catcher Mickey Owen of Brooklyn; and Nap Reyes, infielder, George Hausmann, second baseman, Danny Gardella, outfielder, and Pitcher Ace Adams, all of the New York Giants.

The Mexican League quit trying to lure American stars after it was reorganized last fall and Reyes became the head man.

It was Millionaire Sportsman and Importer Jorge Pasquel who led the raid on American talent in 1946, netting the athletes with contracts the major league magnates said they could not meet had they wanted to.

Baseball Secretary Mulbry reached Mexico City last night by automobile. He said his talks with Commissioner Reyes would be informal, but, answering a question, said the immediate future relations between leagues in the two countries were not confronted with "insurmountable problems."

Owen Ready to Play, Eager to Clear Name

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 21 (AP).—"I'll be glad to get rid of the stigma of 'baseball outlaw,' even if I never play again," Mickey Owen, former Brooklyn Dodgers catcher said today, when informed his suspension for jumping to the Mexican league in 1946 might be lifted.

Owen, who is an auctioneer and makes his home at Willard, Mo., near here, said, "I think I have several good years of baseball left because I have kept in shape." He is 31.

Haight Goes On Blind Date At Quiz Show

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

SOME DAYS it doesn't pay to get up.

For instance, last Tuesday when I arose and mentally consulted my day's agenda, in bold relief were the words, "Don't forget the sports quiz of the Silver Spring Lions Club tonight at the Indian Spring Country Club."

Haight

This quiz, pitting the radio sports guys against the newspaper sports guys, is getting to be an annual affair. Last year, with Shirley Povich, Bob Addie and Francis Stan doing most of the pitching, we managed to nose out Arch McDonald, Bill Brundige, Bob Wolff and Co.

Mindful that I would be called upon to score on race horse questions, I brushed up on the various Preakness and Derby winners during the afternoon. Survivor won the first Preakness in 1873; Sir Barton in 1919; Man o' War in 1920; Victorian in 1928; War Admiral in 1937, etc.

I checked on the Derby. Aristides won the first in 1875; Old Rosebud in 1914; Regret in 1915; Exterminator in 1918; Zev in 1923; Gallant Fox in 1930; Whirlaway in 1941, etc.

WHILE I was about it, I refreshed my memory on other sports. Babe Ruth hit the most homers with 60. Joe Louis stopped Max Baer in 1935; knocked out by Max Schmeling 1936; won title from James J. Braddock in 1937; belted out Schmeling in 1938; beat Buddy Baer here in 1941, etc.

While I was about it, I took a refresher on 1947—the bowl game winners, world series, league pennant races, big fight winners, tennis doings, etc.

Thus mentally armed, I drove through a driving snowstorm, determined to either bring home the bacon for our side or never look another printer straight in the eyes.

At the country club, the small number of cars in the parking area seemed odd, but then I realized press and radio boys are rather allergic to parking with the masses, so let it go at that.

AS I MUSHED toward the clubhouse, I noticed a decided lack of footprints in the snow—an oddity, indeed, with such kidney-foot guys as McDonald, Addie and Michael supposedly there.

However, my suspicions were aroused in earnest when I opened the door and saw the population consisted of two of that easily recognizable species—gin-rummy players.

"Am I being stood up on a blind date with a bunch of Lions?" (I was half snowblind at that.)

I waddled up to the card players and asked, "Isn't there going to be some kind of sports quiz here tonight."

"Not that I know of," one fellow replied, as he put down his cards and said, "I knock with six points."

"I hate to interrupt your game, but are there any Lions around?" I asked.

I DIDN'T get a good glance out of that question so I countered with, "I mean Silver Spring Lions Club."

The dealer asked his opponent if he had 10 cards, fanned out his hand and said, "Every other Tuesday night they're here, I believe."

I gave up on the gin-rummyists and spotted a telephone. "Maybe the quiz is being held elsewhere," I reasoned.

So I phoned WTOP for Arch McDonald. He wasn't there, so I called his home. Someone said Arch wasn't home, "but if you want to find out anything about the Silver Spring Lions Club, call the Indian Spring Country Club."

I didn't have the heart to say, "That's where I am now."

I phoned Arch's secretary, whom I was sure had the date and place marked on his calendar. She wasn't home, but on another call to WTOP, in an attempt to get someone to look on Arch's desk, I was given this advice, "If you want to know anything about the Lions Club call Indian Spring."

I was getting nowhere fast—but I still had nickles, plus the phone.

I CALLED Dr. Graham Lamb, who, despite the name, is a Lion—and no wisecracks about "coming in like, etc."

"I belong to the Bethesda Lions Club, Walter," said Doc, "but I believe you can get some information by calling——"

I broke in with, "Yes, I know. Call the Indian Spring Country Club."

He probably wonders yet how I knew the answer.

I decided to take one more stab. After this fellow said he didn't know anything about the quiz, he hesitated and then came a long drawnout, "Butti—"

I yelled, "If you say anything about Indian Spring I'm coming down there and hit you over the head with a tomahawk!"

Then I surrendered.

Sometimes it doesn't pay to know where you are: Editor's Note—The Silver Spring Lions Club's sports quiz is scheduled for Tuesday, January 27, 1948 at the Indian Spring Country Club.

Bug Juice Beaten by Stretch Run

Miami, Fla., Jan. 21 (AP).—Incline, owned by Joe Tucci of Washington, D. C., and a slight outsider in a field of five, captured the $10,000 added Royal Palm Handicap at Hialeah race course today by two lengths.

Bug Juice, under the silks of Bermill Farm Stables, lost a half length lead in the stretch to the winner for place and Harmonica, owned by the estate of the late John J. Watts, but under the Arnold Hanger silks, was a length and a half behind Bug Juice for third.

Sanford Stud Farm's Round View, winner of the $50,000 Flamingo Stakes in 1946 and a slight favorite, was last. Frank Frankel's Petrol Point was fourth.

The victory was Incline's first in four starts this year and was worth $7700 first money. Two dollar backers received $6.80, $3.90 and $2.50 across the board.

Under Veteran Jockey Doug Dodson and carrying 112 pounds, Incline was clocked for the mile an a furlong test at 1:49 3-5—1 2-5 seconds off the track record held by Stagehand and Brevity. Although a few light showers had fallen earlier, they had little effect on the track's condition.

Petrol Point was the only starter not named for the rich Widener and McLennan Handicaps.

Commodity Exchanges Cut Business Risks, Result: Lower Cost of Food to Consumers; Speculators Render an Essential Service

World Demand Responsible For Grains Hitting New High

Control of Margins Would Upset Free Markets, Which Alone Assure Fair Prices

Last October President Truman blasted away at the "gambling" of speculators on the commodity exchanges, blaming them for high food prices.

Soon political opponents came up with a hot retort. They charged that some of the biggest speculators were "Administration insiders" who used their privileged information to reap big profits.

A political slugfest started. Since then, the going has been hot and heavy. Each night a new charge; each morning a new denial.

But the whole row—a typical election-year brawl—is really only a sideshow that has served to divert attention from the main show and to confuse public thinking about the basic issue.

That issue is clear cut. It can be stated in two simple questions:

(1) What is causing high food prices?

(2) Are transactions on the commodity exchanges responsible?

The answers are just as simple.

(1) Increased demand for food, particularly from Europe, causes high prices.

(2) Transactions on the commodity exchanges are in no way responsible for the price rise.

We don't expect you to take these answers on our say so. You want to know why those are the right answers and how we arrived at them.

Prices Are Not Fixed by Exchanges

First, a definition. What are commodity exchanges?

They are simply market places where buyers and sellers meet, where commodities like wheat and corn are bought and sold. The sellers naturally want to sell at the highest possible price, and the buyers naturally want to buy at the lowest price. When a sale is made, the price is registered on the exchange's quotation board. No prices are "fixed" by the exchange itself; they are all arrived at by open bidding and offering.

The transactions are generally handled by brokers who act as agents, either for a buyer or seller. They make bids or offers on orders from their principals. The actual seller may be in Seattle, the buyer in Philadelphia, and their trade concluded on the floor of the Board of Trade in Chicago.

Exchanges Safeguard the Consumer

If it weren't for the exchanges, a state of confusion would exist. Nobody would know what the right price was for wheat or corn or cotton, and if the buyer didn't know, it's safe to say many a seller would be asking — and getting — prices that are a lot higher than they are now. That means you would be paying a lot more for bread and milk and eggs and clothes—practically everything you eat or wear. It means, too, that the price of those products would fluctuate widely from time to time and place to place, except for the stabilizing effect of commodity trading.

It's precisely because exchanges are so basic to our whole system of living that they frequently find themselves on the spot. When there is an oversupply of wheat, the price naturally goes down—and the farmer just as naturally complains. When there isn't as much wheat as people want, the price goes up, and housewives . . . consumers . . . you and I . . . complain. Either way, "the Exchange" is blamed, even though it is no more at fault than the thermometer which tells you that your child has a fever.

Sometimes the rise or fall of prices is blamed on "insiders". We're not talking here about the alleged "Administration insiders", who have been so much in the headlines lately, but about that old stock character, the professional insider, that mythical man who is always supposed to have special information about what's going to happen.

If you were to analyze such "inside" information, you'd find that almost invariably it was nothing more than what you or I could get by a close study of readily available facts. That is especially true of the commodity markets, for here there is no "inside". Here the essential news is in the newspapers. That news comes from regular public reports of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, supplemented by surveys of crop-forecasting agencies. Here is a business that is really done in a goldfish bowl.

World Demand Makes High Prices

Right now, the world wants a lot more food than we have to offer, a whole lot more. Never in history have supply and demand been so badly out of gear. In this country alone, according to the Department of Agriculture, we are eating on the average 18% more food per person than before the war.

What's really upsetting the price apple cart, however, is the need for food abroad—for every kind of food, but particularly wheat.

Crops in Europe failed badly last summer, disastrously so in France. Result: Out of U. S. wheat crop of 1,408,000,000 bushels, we're shipping abroad 450,000,000 or just about one-third of it. That's eight times our average annual exports in the five years before the war. In just two weeks last fall, our government bought 40,000,000 bushels for Europe, more than we often shipped abroad in a full year before the war.

Now do you still wonder why the price has gone up?

But what about the speculators, you ask. Haven't they been bidding the price up beyond its natural level?

Futures Markets Are Essential

First, we must distinguish between two types of transactions on the exchanges. The one involves wheat for immediate delivery. That's called the "cash" market, and the wheat is called "cash" wheat. The other type of transaction involves wheat for delivery in May, July, September, or December, sometimes other future months. That's called the "futures" market, and what you do when you buy May futures is to enter into a contract guaranteeing you delivery of so much wheat in May.

Speculation is concentrated in the futures market. If speculators were bidding prices up, you might expect futures to be higher-priced than cash wheat. And yet, exactly the reverse is true. Cash wheat is the higher-priced, has been for some time.

The futures market performs a vital function. In fact, it is the very mainspring of the whole mechanism by which farm products go to market in orderly fashion. The cost of distributing commodities in which there is a futures market is much less than otherwise would be the case. And for one fundamental reason: The futures market offers the buyer and seller — and the ultimate consumer, too — a vitally needed insurance against radical price swings.

Futures Are Used to Cut Business Risks

Here's how that works.

Suppose you are a flour miller and you accept an order from a bakery for a lot of flour to be delivered three months from now. The baker naturally wants to know what that flour is going to cost him. So you agree on a price. But let's say you are going to need 100,000 bushels of wheat to make that flour. And there's the big stumbling block. You can't buy all that wheat now, for you simply don't have room to store more than 25,000 bushels at a time. Furthermore, you haven't got the cash to put up, and you don't want to borrow that much. Obviously, you are going to have to buy the wheat from time to time as you need it and as you can handle it. Maybe you are going to have to go into the cash market four times in the next three months to buy wheat.

But suppose the price rises in the meantime. That's going to be tough isn't it? Here you've agreed on a set price for the flour, but you don't know what you are going to have to pay for wheat. If it goes up 5¢ a bushel on the average over the next three months, you stand to lose $5,000 (100,000 bushels x 5¢). If it goes up a dime, you lose $10,000. You could lose the whole profit on the flour contract. You could lose your shirt.

That's the point at which you decide to buy "insurance". And you buy it in the futures market by a process known as "hedging".

Hedging Insures Against Loss

You tell your broker to buy you 100,000 bushels of May wheat, which is now about 10¢ a bushel cheaper than cash wheat. (It wouldn't matter if May wheat were higher than cash wheat; the hedging operation would be exactly the same.)

To buy the futures, you don't have to put up all cash, only a part of it — or what's called margin. You pay your broker $300 commission for handling the transaction for you (about 1/10 of 1% of what the wheat is worth), and you now have contracts guaranteeing you 100,000 bushels of wheat to be delivered in May. As the trade puts it, you are "long 100,000 bushels of May wheat futures".

Next week or next month you need cash wheat to start work on the bakery's flour order. So you buy 25,000 bushels, and simultaneously you tell your broker to sell 25,000 bushels of the May wheat futures you bought.

Why? Here's why. Suppose the price of cash wheat has gone up 10¢ a bushel, just as you feared. On 25,000 bushels of cash wheat you lose $2,500. But since the cash and futures markets almost always move up or down together, the price of May wheat has also gone up 10¢ a bushel. You make $2,500 on the futures and so come out even. You repeat the operation till you get the 100,000 bushels you need — buying cash wheat and selling an equivalent amount of May futures — and you protect yourself against a price rise all the way along.

Hedging Works Regardless of Price Changes

Suppose the price of wheat drops 10¢? You do exactly the same thing. Every time you buy 25,000 bushels of cash wheat, you sell 25,000 bushels of your May futures. But this time you save $2,500 on the cash wheat and lose $2,500 on your futures.

No matter which way the market moves — up or down — you end up with just what you figured on in the first place: your manufacturing profit. That has been insured by hedging. You've taken a big risk out of your business.

Hedging has other uses, too. For instance, if you were a big miller far from the source of supply with lots of storage capacity, you might want to be protected against a price drop, which would cut the value of the wheat you own and store.

Here you just reverse the process. You begin by selling 100,000 May futures. Now if the price of cash wheat rises, you make a "profit" on the actual wheat you bought originally, since it's worth more now, but you have lost a corresponding amount on your futures. If the price drops, you gain on the futures and lose on the wheat you have on hand. Again, you have been insured against price fluctuations. Again, you end up with just your manufacturing profit, no more, no less.

Hedging Cuts Costs Down the Line

Farmers, processors, distributors, everybody in a trade that deals with a commodity like wheat, where there are always price fluctuations, can take a large measure of risk out of their business by hedging in the futures markets. That's why everybody, government officials as well as businessmen, acknowledge the value of hedging — particularly bankers who lend money more readily on inventories that are protected by hedging.

It's beneficial right down the line — right down to the ultimate consumer. For if the miller couldn't hedge his position in the futures market, he'd have to get a higher price for flour in order to protect himself more adequately against a price rise. That means the baker would have to charge more for bread.

Futures Markets Need Speculators

Without the speculator, futures markets just couldn't operate effectively. And for a very simple reason. In any market there has to be a buyer for every seller, if a sale is going to be made. In the futures market, there has to be somebody who wants to go long on May wheat (buy it, that is) for everyone who wants to go short on it (or sell it), if any hedging is going to be done.

That's where the speculator plays his vital role. If it weren't for him, hedging wouldn't work satisfactorily. By buying and selling, first on one side of the market, then the other, he keeps the market active and liquid, keeps the longs and shorts in balance.

Speculators Aren't Gamblers

A gambler is a man who takes an artificial risk; in fact, he creates a risk for the sake of a gamble. He says, "I'll bet the next flip of a coin is heads." He doesn't have to flip that coin; he does it because he wants to make a wager.

A speculator is a man who takes a risk that is inherent in a situation. In wheat, that risk lies in the grain itself. Somebody always has to be a speculator in wheat. If a farmer holds his wheat, he is speculating — hoping for a price rise, running the risk of a price decline. And when the farmer sells his wheat, the miller takes over the speculation. He takes the risk that prices might drop, that he might have been able to buy at a lower price later.

Wheat is harvested in about three months, but it is used over a period of twelve months. For nine months of the year somebody has to hold the price bag. Somebody has to speculate.

Often that man is the speculator on the exchanges. The farmer or miller who wants to unload his risk can transfer it to the speculator through the medium of the Chicago Board of Trade, the Kansas City Board of Trade, or the Minneapolis Grain Exchange, the three principal markets in the United States dealing in wheat futures.

Speculators Render Vital Service

Speculators fulfill an important economic function. Economists generally are agreed on that. Not even the Commodity Exchange Authority, which is the government agency charged with overseeing operations on the exchanges, would argue with that.

Nevertheless, so few people understand the job he does that he is always regarded with suspicion. If he buys a futures contract, he may sell it out rather than take delivery of the wheat; if he sells a contract, he may square his position by buying back in again later, for chances are he has no wheat to deliver, and penalties for failing to fulfill a contract are severe.

He's blamed, too, by those who don't understand his function, for "selling the nation's wheat crop eight or ten times over." If he does, it's all to the good, because it makes for broader markets, without which farmer and miller couldn't hedge their positions effectively.

The number of times that a crop is sold and resold in the futures markets is without meaning as far as the price of actual wheat is concerned. That will always be determined by the size of the crop and the demand for it. In effect, the futures markets are places where business insurance policies are bought and sold.

Speculators Do Not Boost Prices

No less an authority than Mr. J. M. Mehl, Administrator of the Commodity Exchange Authority, can be cited on that point.

On November 24, 1947, Mr. Mehl said, "It is not believed that speculation is a basic factor in determining the general level of prices in the long run." And Mr. Mehl told that to the senators and representatives who are members of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report.

Speculators as Group Do Not Make Big Money

At the same hearing, Mr. Henry H. Cate, president of the Flour Mills of America, said that there was no evidence to indicate that wheat speculators as a group made money in the long run but that, on the contrary, there was evidence to suggest that they lost money. He further testified that, regardless of what they made or lost, there was no question that they carried the risk inherent in wheat at a cost far less than would be charged to the consumer in the form of higher bread prices if millers and bakers carried that risk.

There Is Danger—

That the commodity exchanges will be made a political football.

That the government will upset the delicately adjusted mechanism of the futures markets.

That you will pay still higher prices for food as a result.

Every consumer — and that means every American — should be alert to the danger that out of this political free-for-all may come retaliatory measures directed against the commodity exchanges themselves, when in reality world scarcity of wheat is the basic cause of high prices.

The first step against the exchanges was taken last fall when the Administration bludgeoned the grain exchanges into doubling their margin requirements on speculative accounts, thus making it more difficult for hedgers to insure themselves against loss.

Doubling of Margins Has Backfired

The Administration insisted on increased margins in order to make it tough on speculators and thereby reduce the price of wheat. Or so it thought.

Now look what happened!

In the following thirty trading days, Mr. Mehl reported to the Congressional investigating committee, "trading in wheat was reduced 45%. That's what the Administration expected.

But — and here's what the Administration didn't expect — in that same period, the price rose still higher. According to Mr. Mehl, it advanced 20¢ a bushel.

The New York Times foresaw this possibility when it said on October 17:

"It is time for some plain speaking about this issue of 'gambling.' When the President began his food-saving campaign . . . one of his first steps was to demand that trading margins on the commodity exchanges be raised from 17 per cent to 33⅓ per cent . . .

"The policy . . . was ill-advised and unfortunate. But it would be infinitely more unfortunate and more costly to perpetuate the error by attempting to keep alive the fiction that speculation is at the root of the nation's food-price troubles."

Yet that is exactly what the Administration is doing. It is using the hobgoblin of the speculator to try to scare Congress into enacting a law that would give the government power to regulate margins as it might see fit.

Government Wants to Rig Prices

The present regulation which the government exercises over the markets, beginning with the Grain Futures Act of 1922, is all to the good, for that regulation is designed to guarantee that the markets shall really be free markets — free from any suggestion that they are rigged or that prices are improperly influenced.

But the proposed new grant of power would constitute regulation of an utterly different stripe. If the Commodity Exchange Authority were given power to regulate margins at will, it would mean that the government was going into the business of rigging the market itself. For the sole objective of such legislation would be to try to manipulate prices by manipulating margin requirements.

No government agency should be allowed to tinker with commodity margins. The government's role in the market should be restricted to that of umpire. If it assumes any measure of direct control, the markets are no longer free, and the market prices are no longer free or fair.

Canada Has Tried Regulation—and Failed

Consider what has happened in Canada where for the last few years the Canadian Wheat Board has been set up as the sole agency through which wheat could be sold. This, in summary, is the story that Mr. H. G. L. Strange, research director of the Searle Grain Co. of Winnipeg told our Congressional investigating committee at the hearing on December 3.

Last year, Canadian wheat growers got about $419 million less for their crop — $1,600 a farmer—than they would have if it had been sold on the U. S. free market. Next spring, a lot of Canadian wheat just isn't going to get planted. And a lot more won't ever get to market; it will be fed to livestock and poultry.

But the real point of the story is that the Canadian Wheat Board made what now appears to have been one of the biggest price boners of all times. In July, 1946, it thought there was going to be a surplus of wheat, and so when it signed an agreement with Great Britain, promising delivery of 600 million bushels of wheat in the following four years, it set the price for the first two years at only $1.55 a bushel!

In other words, as Mr. Strange put it, that board, established "to prevent speculators from making profits at the expense of farmers," literally sold short 600 million bushels of wheat in a rising market. It sold its own people—the Canadian farmers — short, for it was speculating "not with the government's money but with the future income of . . . farmers."

There Is No Substitute for Free Markets

Nothing could make clearer the value of free commodity exchanges. No government board can ever weigh the thousands of market factors that go to make a fair price. Its judgment can never be a substitute for the collective opinion of thousands of hedgers and speculators, crystallized in open prices, openly arrived at, on free commodity exchanges.

We have free markets now. Let's keep them. Let's guard them.

* * * * * *

This is the case for free trading on free exchanges as we see it. It is obvious that we have a partisan interest, for we execute orders for thousands of our customers, hedgers and speculators alike, on the futures markets, and in addition we buy or sell cash commodities as brokers. We do not buy or sell any commodities for ourselves.

We are proud of our business, proud of the opportunity to play an important part in an industry that is so vital to the welfare of the whole United States. But let the record also show that our interest in the principle of free trading is far greater than our selfish interest in the futures markets. Our income is derived principally from our securities business.

What They Say About Exchanges . . . And Speculation

"Speculation . . . is the self-adjustment of society to the probable. Its value is well known as a means of avoiding or mitigating catastrophes, equalizing prices, and providing for periods of want. It is true that the success of the strong induces imitation by the weak, and that incompetent persons bring themselves to ruin by undertaking to speculate in their turn. But legislatures and courts generally have recognized that the natural evolutions of a complex society are to be touched only with a very cautious hand . . ."

MR. JUSTICE HOLMES, U. S. Supreme Court, May 8, 1905

"The sole and vital use which my company makes of the grain futures market is for this purpose of hedging to minimize the price risk. This is of real value, not only in contributing to the stability of our company's operations, but in making it possible to sell our products at a lower cost to the consumer than we could if we had to make provision for potential losses due to price fluctuations."

HARRY BULLIS, Chairman of Board, General Mills, Inc., Minneapolis Morning Tribune, January 12, 1948

"A hedger is not a speculator . . . he is using the futures market in a sense to avoid speculation and to get the equivalent of price insurance . . . We recognize that in order to facilitate hedging you must have some speculation."

J. M. MEHL, Administrator of Commodity Exchange Authority, U. S. Department of Agriculture, November 24, 1947

"Government purchase of grains is the dominating factor establishing cash and future prices in the grain markets of the United States."

REP. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN, Chairman, Select Committee to Investigate Commodity Transactions, July 26, 1947

"Because professional speculators do nothing but buy and sell . . . the belief has gained currency that speculators are parasites. Especially does the man in the street find his sense of propriety shocked by 'short' selling—that is, the selling of something, say wheat, which one does not possess. Nevertheless, the professional speculator in grain, coffee, cotton, sugar, provisions, and many other articles is extremely useful . . . The professional speculator may diminish the hazards of speculative production by reducing the fluctuations in price."

SUMNER H. SLICHTER, Harvard University in "Modern Economic Society"

"Gambling represents the creation of risks not previously existing—e.g., race-track betting — whereas 'speculation' applies to the taking of risks that are implicit in a situation and so must be taken by someone."

BENJAMIN GRAHAM and D. L. DODD, Columbia University in "Security Analysis"

"There is always much talk about the evils of speculation, for the reason that the important economic functions filled by speculators are not understood . . . During the course of its 60 years of activity, no less than eighteen Royal Commissions have thoroughly investigated the Winnipeg futures market. Not one of them ever recommended that the market should be closed; not one ever recommended any curtailment or hampering of its operations. These commissions decided the futures market . . . performed important services to both producers and consumers."

H. G. L. STRANGE, Director Research Department, Searle Grain Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, Canada, December 3, 1947.

"There is no evidence that suggests to me as an economist that the operations on the grain exchanges themselves have in any sense caused the price rise on grains to be greater than it would have been with a closer or different regulation of those exchanges."

ROLAND S. VAILE, University of Minnesota, December 2, 1947

"Forming judgment upon world-wide conditions and forming it accurately enough to stake millions of capital upon it is perhaps the heaviest hazard in our whole modern economic organization of society. But some class of investors must do it, or the customers must pay a higher price for their produce, and producers must be content to enter the market with fewer competitors ready to buy and carry their own surplus."

Report on Speculation by Industrial Commission, appointed by Congress, 1898

A Question of Right—Public and Private

If it is true that "Administration insiders" profited from their knowledge of the government's buying program by speculating in the wheat market, they have violated a public trust and shown themselves unworthy of office.

That much is clear. But it is also clear that in the investigation of this alleged scandal, thousands of honest American citizens have been unfairly subjected to unwarranted public abuse. Publication of their names would seem to infringe rights guaranteed them as free American citizens.

It is true that such publication by the Department of Agriculture was authorized by a special Act of Congress on December 19 which revoked a provision of the Commodity Exchange Act, specifically assuring them of anonymity. Hence, the action may have been technically legal. It was nonetheless morally wrong.

As risk-takers or speculators, these individuals were performing a valuable function in our economy. Their transactions were wholly legitimate, specifically sanctioned by law. They are deserving of our commendation, not criticism or condemnation.

Substitute Bill Offered by Taft On Retirements

RETIREMENT: A new bill to liberalize the Civil Service retirement system was introduced yesterday by Senator Taft (R., Ohio) the Republican leader. His measure is a combination of the Stevenson and the Langer-Chavez bills. The Senate is slated to debate the Taft bill tomorrow.

But a fight is sure to be made on the Taft bill unless several Senators withdraw their opposition in the meantime. Taft had hoped to draw up a compromise bill which would have the support of all factions. He hasn't been successful.

It was reported late yesterday that both Senator Williams (R., Del.) and Byrd (D., Va.) were opposed to the two provisions which would be used to compute employe pensions. These provisions would have the effect of increasing the annuities of employe who will retire. They are:

That an annuity be computed by this formula: 1½ per cent of highest average salary for five years multiplied by years of service, or 1 per cent of such average salary plus $25 and multiplied by years of service.

A proposed compromise was suggested that would allow the employe to figure his annuity by 1¼ per cent of annual salary, plus $20, multiplied by years of service.

The Taft bill differs from the House-approved Stevenson in these respects:

1. It would guarantee modest benefits to children under 18 of Federal workers who die;

2. A maximum of 35 years of service would count toward the computation of an annuity. It's reported that this 35-year ceiling would save about 30 million dollars, and,

3. An annuity would be limited to 80 per cent of the highest average salary for five consecutive years. The Langer bill would allow up to 90 per cent.

In general, very few changes are proposed in the Taft bill. Experts who know the retirement system say it's a good and liberal bill.

BILLS: Representative Corbett (R., Pa.) yesterday drafted a Federal worker pay bill which provides:

That all employes paid up to $1700 annually be given a permanent 35 per cent increase, plus a temporary $200 bonus based on the cost of living, and that all employes paid more than $1700 be given a flat permanent increase of $600, plus a temporary cost of living bonus of $200.

Representative Foote (R., Conn.) yesterday put in a bill to speed up automatic in-grade promotions. His bill would require Federal agencies to make the raises effective on the first day following the 12- and 18-month waiting periods. Foote said bookkeeping delays the raises from 5 to 30 days.

CAA: F. B. Lee, a deputy administrator of Civil Aeronautics, is slated to succeed Theodore P. Wright as CCA administrator when his resignation goes into effect. He's sure to be named acting administrator.

CAB: In all the fuss over the $10,000 ceiling on the salaries of members of the Civil Aeronautics Board, this one point is overlooked:

That the CAB law fixes the salaries of its five members at $12,000 each. But the pinch-penny House Appropriations Committee won't appropriate more than $10,000 each for member salaries. It not only has evaded the law but it's forcing able and experienced people out of the Federal service.

JOBS: The Civil Service Board at Bolling Field will begin exams early next month to fill about 1400 civilian jobs at both Bolling and Andrews Fields. Tests will be given for these jobs:

Painters, carpenters, hospital attendants, fire fighters, nurses' aids, electricians, plumbers, clothing repairers, fabric and leather workers, meteorologists, storekeepers, and warehousemen. Get full details by calling FRanklin 9000, Branch 562 or 626.

NOTES: Frank Pace will be sworn in next Tuesday as assistant director of the Budget Bureau. His is a good appointment. Pace is now executive assistant to the Postmaster General . . . CIVIL SERVICE soon will issue regulations on the Gold Star Mothers' Act. The new bill will extend veterans preference to widowed mothers of men or women who were either killed or totally disabled in the military service.

NAVY employes are up in arms over the lack of parking space. More than 300 employes in the Ordnance Bureau have signed a petition to the Secretary which urges:

Area Police Get 2 Juvenile Gangs Of Plunderers

Band in Arlington Cited for 13 Crimes; Series Held Solved In Prince Georges

Police break-up of two bands of juvenile plunderers which operated separately in Arlington, Va., and Hyattsville, Md., was disclosed yesterday.

Arlington County police announced the arrests of two 14-year-old boys, alleged leaders of a small band of after-dark thieves. The pair, with accomplices, are believed responsible for looting 13 business establishments and Washington and Lee High School in the past two weeks.

Prince Georges County police arrested the second band yesterday when they took four youths into custody. The arrests, county police said, ended a two-weeks' series of burglaries in Hyattsville in which thieves had entered two hardware stores, a delicatessen, a beauty parlor and a sanding machine company.

In the Arlington arrests, Tuesday night, a quantity of stolen stick phosphorus "sufficient to blow up the courthouse" was safely recovered in the basement of the home of one of the two boys. The chemicals, still secure and safe in their water-filled containers, had been stolen from the high school chemical laboratory, police said.

Much of the $200 cash and $800 worth of materials and merchandise stolen in the Arlington forays has been recovered, the police reported.

The Arlington gang of juveniles proved unsuccessful in amateur safecracking attempts at three establishments they entered, police said. The tampered safes were at the Metropolitan Building and Loan Association, 2828 Wilson blvd.; Sears Roebuck and Co., 2800 Wilson blvd., and Acacia Laundry, 1111 Wilson blvd., Arlington.

The Prince Georges County arrests developed from a tip that one of the four suspects was seen squandering $35 in a "For Amusement Only" slot machine. Police arrested him for questioning and subsequently picked up the other three.

Police listed their loot as $150 in cash, including $45 taken from March of Dimes' containers, four .22-caliber rifles, a quantity of bullets, a radio, 15 pocket knives, eight cigarette lighters, 12 cartons of cigarettes and a flashlight, most of which were recovered.

The youths, two 16 years old and two 17, told police they had planned to use the rifles to hold up the Prince Georges Country Club last Sunday night but that their car, which they had stolen, broke down on the way there.

They were rounded up beginning at 3 a. m. yesterday by Hyattsville City Policemen Elmer Thompson, Kenneth Moureau, Charles Williams and Police Chief Howard H. Holmes.

County Court Fines Seven In Gambling

Saved from possible jail sentences by the time element of their arrests, seven gaming defendants were yesterday fined $300 each in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

Judge Charles C. Marbury, who imposed sentence, told them they escaped with fines solely because they were arrested before his public pronouncement, December 16, that henceforth guilty gamblers would go to jail.

Those fined, all of whom pleaded guilty, included Nelson Purdham, 37, of 4705 Riverdale rd., Riverdale, Md., and Ann McCallister, 40, of 4701 Queensbury rd., Riverdale. They were arrested October 11 in police raid on a Riverdale tavern at Rhode Island ave. and Queensbury rd., and charged with setting up and maintaining gambling operations.

Cases against two others arrested in the same raid were ordered held in abeyance, by the court. They were against the tavern operator, John W. Heinicke, 39, of 4719 Rittenhouse st., Riverdale, and Hal B. Bell of 3404 Rhode Island ave., Mount Rainier, Md., alleged owner of slot machines.

In the second case heard yesterday, five defendants of seven persons arrested in a numbers raid on a house in Fairmount Heights, Md., November 20, were given $300 fines in lieu of six months' imprisonment. They were:

Alfred D. Paulson, 35, of 638 Kenyon st. nw.; Walter R. Powell, 45, of 822 Vernon st. nw.; Willie E. Brent, 45, of 143 W st. nw.; Helen M. Hayes, 34, of 5520 Jay st. ne., and Minnie M. Chase, 25, of 1727 1st st. nw.

The court held in abeyance charges against two others arrested in the raid. They were Edwin W. Morris, 44, occupant of the raided home at 700 60th ave., Fairmount Heights, and Beatrice Hasty 42, of Accokeek, Md., who was present during the raid.

Charges were also ordered put over in a third gambling case involving two men arrested in a parked automobile by Brentwood, Md., police, October 11. Charged with operating a numbers game, they are Samuel, Morgan, 42, of 705 Wayne ave., Silver Spring, Md., and Andrew O. Brown, 40, of 439 M st. nw.

'Counter-Attack'

Overton Bill Hits at D. C. 'Fast' Time

Senator John H. Overton (D., La.) yesterday struck at daylight-saving time for Washington with a bill to require Federal agencies and officials to operate on standard time.

Senator Overton introduced the bill in the Senate and it was referred to the committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

The bill proposes that in all the Nation's time zones set up by the law of 1918, "standard time of the zone shall be used in all businesses affecting commerce."

It would also compel the District government to use standard time.

Senator Overton led the fight last year against daylight-saving time for Washington.

In presenting the bill, Senator Overton told the Senate "This bill is intended by me as a counter-attack against the daylight-savings bill for the District, which was enacted last March."

The bill of last year gave Washington daylight-saving time for one summer only. District Committee members in both Houses have introduced bills to let the District have daylight-saving time each summer.

Tax Consultant Hears Accuser In Fraud Trial

Bernard Phillip Nimro, 45, Washington tax consultant, yesterday went on trial in District Court on charges of larceny after trust and embezzlement of a $2628 check from a State Department official.

Loy W. Henderson of 820 Connecticut ave. nw., chief of the Near East Division, State Department, told a jury of 10 men and 2 women that he gave the check, which represented a refund on his 1945 Federal income tax, to Nimro in August, 1946, to put in a special account under his (Henderson's) name.

Nimro, who has offices at 1614 K st. nw., had made out his income tax return, Henderson stated. He said he had not believed he was entitled to such a large refund and had asked Nimro to keep the money in case the Bureau of Internal Revenue found an error in his return and requested the sum back. He could not take care of the matter himself, because his work requires much traveling, he explained.

A year later, when he checked on the matter with Nimro, he found the check had been deposited in Nimro's own account at the Liberty National Bank, Henderson testified.

At that time he sent Nimro a registered letter, asking that the money be returned, but he never heard from Nimro nor was he able to get in touch with him after that time, Henderson said.

Rent Extension Hearing Set For Jan. 30

District residents will be given an opportunity January 30 to tell the Commissioners whether they want a one-year extention of rent control here to March 31, 1949.

The public hearing is scheduled for 10 a. m. at the District Building Board Room, the Commissioners announced yesterday.

Notices are being sent to approximately 350 civic and business organizations, including all citizens and civic associations, the Board of Trade and real estate groups.

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.), chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee, introduced a bill in the House January 6 to continue the present District Rent Act through March 31, 1949. The present District law expires March 31 this year.

Rent Control Administrator Robert E. Cogswell already has called for a year's extension of control because housing demands still greatly evceed available accommodations here.

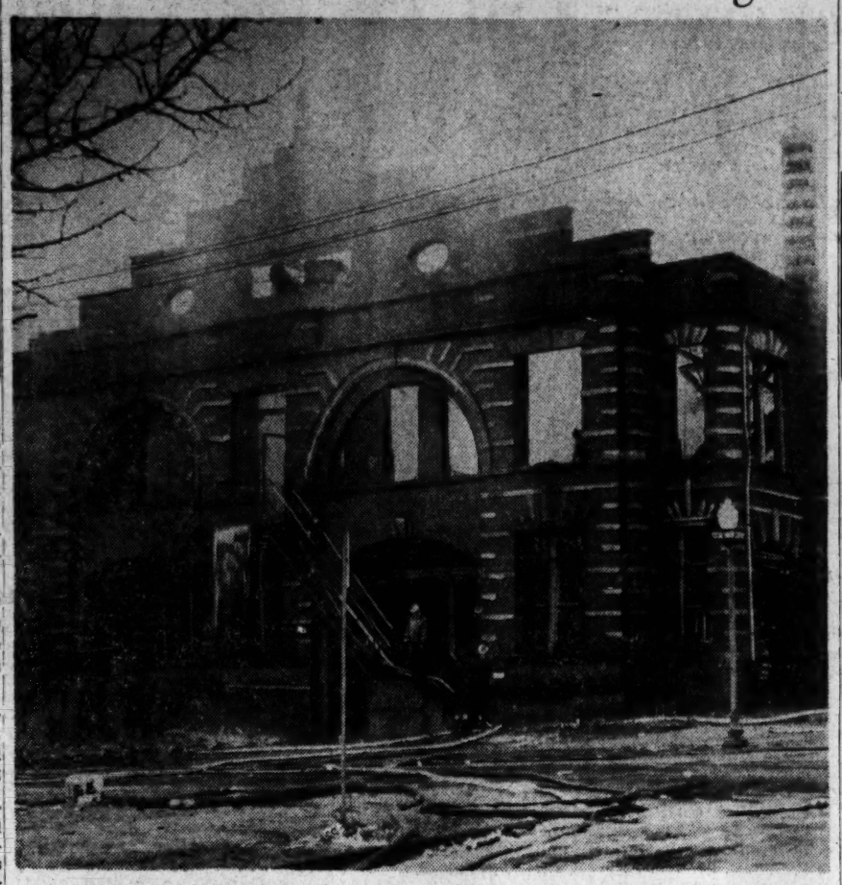
Five-Alarm Blaze Sweeps Nearly Block Of Warehouses in Old Coliseum Building



COLISEUM LEFT AN EMPTY SHELL—After the flames died and the smoke cleared, this was the old Coliseum, 26th and E sts. nw. A general alarm fire early yesterday raged almost three house in the building, long time a landmark in the heart of Foggy Bottom, and used as a warehouse by the State Department, Marine Corps and Heurich's Brewery

FIREBOAT CALLED OUT—The District's new fireboat, the William T. Belt, called into action for the first time, dropped 10 lines into the Potomac and pumped thousands of gallons of water into the burning Coliseum Building, only a short distance from the waterfront. The pumper (left) of Engine Company 16 dropped a draft line into the river to furnish four hoses

A five-alarm fire early yesterday caused about $250,000 damage in nearly a city block of warehouses on 26th st. There was no injury or loss of life.

From the time the first alarm came in, at 4:39 yesterday morning, until the fire was under control at about 7 a. m., firemen were hampered by low water pressure, freezing temperatures and fear the fire might spread to seven nearby frame dwelling houses.

Both Federal and District agencies are investigating the blaze, which apparently started in the second floor of the warehouse section at 520 26th st. nw., used by the Marine Corps. It spread rapidly through the old Coliseum rink and a State Department repair shop and finally hit the Christian Heurich warehouse at 500 26th st. nw.

The fire was confined to the business structures, which are on the west side of 26th Street, across from the brewing company's garage. Seven small frame houses complete the structures on the west side of the 500 block. Waterside drive is the west boundary of the block, E Street is the south boundary.

Fire Marshal Raymond C. Roberts said yesterday that the fire "probably" was caused by faulty electrical wiring in the Marine Corps warehouse. He attributed its rapid spread to the large, unbroken area of the Coliseum. Marshal Roberts said first floors of all but the Marine Corps sector was intact, and that there was no danger of building collapse.

Fred J. Alleigio, a public buildings administration guard on duty in the State Department section, turned in the first alarm. He then routed out two Marines, sleeping in the Marine section of the warehouse. They were Tech. Sergt. Daniel McCarty of 1135 New Hampshire ave. nw. and Corpl. Ernest Carle, 1506 15th st. nw., who worked feverishly to drive out 14 cars that were on the ground floor of the warehouse.

While flames shot up into a murky sky, about 40 residents in the northern section of the block were routed from their homes, and more alarms were turned in. The fifth alarm was sounded at 4:57 a. m. At 5:31, a special alarm brought the fire boat, William T. Belt, to the river section just back of the blaze, and 12 lines were run up from the fireboat to pump river water on the blaze.

Joseph A. Mayhew, deputy chief of the Fire Department, who called the fire the "most fire I've seen in 40 years," said the blaze could have been controlled more quickly if the firefighters had not been hampered by low water pressure.

No official estimate of damage was available.

State Department spokesmen said the State Department had a carpenter and paint shop at 510 26th st. and at the time of the blaze "one or two reels" of film were in the shop for repair.

The Marine depot is used as a refueling point for Marine Corps cars. Gasoline storage tanks, under the site of the fire, did not ignite. Some goods belonging to Marine Corps officers, which were being crated for shipment, were lost.

W. A. Stowell, secretary of the Christian Heurich Brewing Co., said the first floor of 500 26th st. nw. was used by the company as an auto repair shop. Vehicles were removed before the fire reached that sector.

While the major portion of Fire Department personnel fought the blaze, reorganization plan E was put into effect, splitting up the city's companies so that no part of the city would be unprotected. Eighteen out of 30 engine companies in the city were called out for the blaze, as well as six truck companies, two water towers, two rescue squads, four chiefs, the deputy chief and the chief engineer.

Tuck Submits Reorganization Plan for Virginia

In Assembly

Alexandria Special Poll Bill Offered

Richmond, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Lawmakers from the northern Virginia area today introduced six bills as the Virginia General Assembly continued its 1948 deliberations.

Delegate A. L. Boothe of Alexandria introduced a bill to provide for a special election in Alexandria March 2 where voters would determine whether they want a city council composed of seven members elected at large, or of nine members, of which six would be from wards and three at large.

Senator Andrew W. Clarke introduced a bill to authorize Fairfax County to establish and maintain a system of pensions, retirement allowances and death benefits for officers. Another bill would regulate sale of lots in cemeteries.

Another bill introduced by Senator Clarke would amend the Judges Retirement Act by allowing hustings, circuit or corporation court judges to retire at 60 after having served 25 years, at three-fourths pay. At present, the retirement age is 70 after 15 years service, or 75 if commissioned before April, 1937.

Senator Charles R. Fenwick introduced a measure to transfer examination for drivers' licenses and motor vehicle inspections from the Division of Motor Vehicles to the Department of State Police.

A constitutional amendment to permit Federal and State Government employes to serve as registrars and judges in elections was offered by legislators from this area.

Government employes still would be unable to serve on the electoral board under the amendment proposed by Delegate James M. Magruder of Arlington County, George Damm of Arlington County, and Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria.

Also in today's session, a bill for a new Richmond city charter was sent on its way to committee for study.

Delegate Roy B. Davis of Halifax, was principal patron of a resolution to end poll-tax payments. The proposed constitutional amendments to eliminate the poll tax were passed by the 1946 Assembly. They must be passed by the current session and submitted to people's vote next November.

Would Combine 72 Agencies Into 11 Departments, Prune Personnel

Special to The Washington Post

Richmond, Va., Jan. 21.—Gov. William M. Tuck today gave the Virginia General Assembly a broom and asked it to sweep out inefficiency in the State's government.

Proposing a far-reaching plan of reorganization, Tuck, in his second appearance before the Assembly this year, told legislators the State's governmental machinery was "so cumbersome that remedial action should be taken forthwith."

The proposed plan would cut administrative costs at least a million and a half dollars a year, and trim down the number of the State's employes from present ranks of 25,000 full and part-time workers.

Would Merge Agencies

"We have too many employes," said Tuck. "This is not a criticism of our State employes, but of the manner in which our agencies are set up and related. The consolidation of related activities will decrease the personnel needed to do the job . . . I am not unsympathetic to the feelings of the personnel who may be affected when the reduction in our forces occurs. The welfare of the people of Virginia comes first."

Governor Tuck wants to pull the scattered 72 State departments, boards and agencies now in operation in Virginia into 11 strong executive departments and six staff agencies. This plan of reorganization was the result of studies made by a commission headed by former United States Representative Thomas G. Burch, who was assisted by the consulting firm of Griffenhagen & Associates.

It is the first reorganization effort since the Byrd reorganization of 1927-28, which set up 12 major departments in the executive branch. These have since grown to 55 departments plus 17 examining boards.

Would Keep Present Officials

The 11 proposed "super departments," which would deal directly with the public, would absorb the administrative and policy duties of the manifold agencies now often rendering duplicate services. They would be headed by directors appointed by the Governor and drawn whereaver possible from the present State family.

Consolidations as envisioned are widespread: purchases would be centralized to effect cost economies, and the automotive garages now operated by the ABC board, the budget division and the State police would be put under the department of highways. Tuck made no recommendations on higher education other than to request authority to name a commission to study the problem, including medical education. He asked for establishment of a department of higher education, to be headed by a chancellor. A single board would replace the existing boards of trustees of the six State institutions.

Up 11.4% in Year

Food Prices Hit 220.4% Of '39 Index

Retail food prices here continued upward during the period November 15 to December 15, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

Washington housewives paid 2.7 per cent more for food during the period, with rises in every major food category.

Figures indicated the District's price index on December 15, which stood at 207.4 per cent of the 1935-9 average, hit a record high 12 per cent above the post-World War I peak of June 1920. The index was 120.4 per cent above August 15, 1939, 42.5 per cent above June 15, 1946, and 11.4 per cent above the same date a year ago.

Coffee prices increased nearly 4 per cent.

Carrots and onions, reportedly in unusually short supply, jumped 18 and 22 per cent, respectively, a record among individual items covered by the bureau.

A boost of 10.5 per cent was registered by butter, which moved from an average of 88 cents a pound in mid-November to 97.5 cents in mid-December. Lard rose 11 per cent.

Meats, poultry and fish were up 1.5 per cent over the previous month.

Chillum Area Gets Special Services

Chillum, Md., subdivisions were given special improvement district status yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners, following a public hearing at Hyattsville. The district will be known as No. 34.

Included are Michigan Park Hills, Chillum Gardens, Oakdale Terrace, Sargent Knolls, Chillum Manor and properties along Riggs, Ray, Chillum and Sargent rds.

The residents, as result of the action, now will be abl to provide special services for their area such as trash collection, street lights, road improvements and similar services to be paid by residents of the area on their tax bills.

June School Election Opposed in Arlington

A proposal by Arlington's legislative delegation to hold separate school board elections was attacked yesterday by Harley M. Williams, chairman of the Arlington Better Government League.

General Assembly Delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, and State Senator Charles Fenwick announced they would seek legislation to permit holding the school board elections in June and remove them from the "partisan influence" of the November polls.

Such a move, Williams said, "would undoubtedly result in less participation by independent voters" in school elections, and put the school system back into the hands of what he termed a political machine.

Historic Farm Sold

Historic White Marsh Farm, near Gloucester, Va., has been purchased by William Ingles, labor relations counsel with offices in the Tower Building here, for a reported price of $150,000.

Marsh, who recently established residence on the Virginia estate after several years of traveling, confirmed the sale yesterday but declined to comment on the purchase price, which was reported by the Associated Press. The property, originally known as White Marsh Plantation, was purchased from C. H. Lawson of Williamsburg, Va., its owner since 1942.

Before the estate was bought by Lawson, it was owned by Hartwig N. Baruch, brother of New York financier Bernard M. Baruch. It comprises about 1984 acres and a large residence in Gloucester County.

On Women Drivers

Are women drivers more cautious than men?

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the Traffic Division, thinks so.

He disclosed yesterday that for every woman driver involved in a fatal accident here in 1946 and 1947 there have been 36 men drivers.

"I have often seen men drivers with one arm around a girl," said Miller, "but I've never seen any one-arm women drivers. Maybe that's one reason."

Appeal Judgment

A Montgomery County couple yesterday sought reversal of a Montgomery Circuit Court decision setting aside a $1500 judgment awarded them last year.

In an appeal filed with the Maryland Circuit Court at Annapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Stevens asked the high court to set its own figure for damages they claimed was due them as the result of a building concern's failure to carry out a contract for construction of their home at Glenview A judgment previously awarded the couple by a jury was overruled by Judge Stedman Prescott of the circuit court after an appeal by the defendants.

The Stevens charged real estate agents with leading them to believe the builders, Philip and David Milestone, would include insulation, weatherstripping, a flagstone walk and other items in the construction. They said the additional items were missing when the house was completed in July, 1946.

Condition Is 'Fair'

A 40-year-old Hyattsville woman, severely burned when a chair in which she was sleeping in her home caught fire late Tuesday, was reported in "fairly good" condition at Prince Georges County Hospital last night.

Mrs. Ollie Ayoub, of 4631 42nd pl., suffered second and third degree burns of the body in the fire, which apparently resulted from a cigarette, according to Hyattsville police. She was found asleep in the burning chair by her daughter, Betty, 20, who extinguished the fire with the assistance of neighbors.

District workmen yesterday began installing 200 new seats in the recently redecorated District Building Board room. The job is expected to take three to four days.

Check Charge Placed

Police here said Charles Howard Smith, jr., 27, former employe of Mehring & Hansen Co., contracting firm, changed the figures on a company payroll check, then falsified a bookkeeping entry to cover the loss.

Detective Sergt. David A. Higgins said Smith had been on a round of Florida nightclubs before his arrest in Roanoke. Freed on $500 bond on a charge of grand larceny, Smith is scheduled for a February 15 removal hearing in Roanoke.

Higgins said a current audit of company books is expected to disclose additional losses.

Pauley Requests Order on Stassen To Prove Charges

Edwin W. Pauley last night asked that Harold E. Stassen be required to furnish detailed proof and give the sources of his information on Stassen's charges that Pauley profited from "inside information" in commodity market dealings.

Pauley, special assistant to the Secretary of the Army and former special Ambassador on reparations, made public a letter to Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of an Appropriations Subcommittee, which heard Stassen's charges.

He asked that Stassen, candidate for the Republican nomination for President, be directed to bring this information when he is recalled to the witness stand Friday::

1. A chart or other document correlating Pauley's purchases of grains and other commodities with Government purchases, to back up Stassen's statement that Pauley's moves in and out of the market followed a pattern related to Federal dealings.

2. A full list of records, and where they may be found, on which Stassen based his statement that "we know where to subpena the decords to prove our case against Pauley."

3. Any proof Stassen may have that any official or employe of the Government gave Pauley any information, "inside" or otherwise, on commodity markets, the nature of any such information, and where and when it was given.

Farm Committee Seeks to Restrain D. C. Zoning Board

Ralph W. Moore, secretary of the National Farm Committee, yesterday asked District Court to restrain the District's Board of of Zoning Adjustment from evicting the committee from offices at 1717 N st. nw.

Moore contended in the suit that he understood at the time he purchased the property in January, 1946, that zoning in the area permitted buildings to be used partially for residential and partially for office purposes for nonprofit and educational institutions.

The suit maintains that the area is allegedly residential and occupied by business premises. The board has asked Moore to vacate, although the committee, chartered in Texas, is nonprofit and devoted to the arts and sciences—namely the education of farmers in farming methods, crop prices, etc., the stated.

Truman Praises Missionaries as Peace Purveyors

Missionaries here for Baptist World Mission Week services yesterday were praised by President Truman as "frontier purveyors of peace."

The Chief Executive, himself a Baptist, told the churchmen visiting the White House that there were thousands of agreements in world history which were temporarily expedient, but "treaties are no good unless they are backed up by the hearts and minds of the people."

"When the selfish interests of the people involved overrode those treaties, trouble generally broke out," he added.

He assured the missionaries that "we have no selfish interest in treaties or anything of the sort." The one aim of the United States in its foreign relations, he said, "has been simply a world peace that would work for the welfare as a whole."

No dates have been announced for future concerts by Miss Truman. Her teacher, Mrs. T. J. Strickler, is still in Kansas City, Mo.

South Balcony or Feller? Let the President Answer

Any mention of the south balcony or Feller has been ruled out of Mrs. Truman's press conference by her secretary, Mrs. James Helm. Both subjects, she insists, belong to the President's press talks.

Mrs. Helm did admit, however, that a White House dog is under pressure from an admiring public and has to be a gregarious creature. Falla, she said, had an ego which enabled him to carry through with great eclat.

Party Lines Down

Mrs. Truman Feted By Cabinet Hostesses

By Marie McNair

PARTY lines were down for the tea yesterday given in honor of Mrs. Truman by two popular Cabinet ladies—Mrs. Clinton Anderson and Mrs. Lewis Schwellenbach.

It was a strictly feminine gathering that met in the Congressional Club's big oval ballroom to honor the First Lady, and tea time talk was strictly on the feminine side. The Marine Band played from its station among feathery ferns; the tea table had a succession of good looking ladies at the tea and coffee services, and a large punch bowl in the alcove offered refreshing apple juice punch made from those giant apples from Washington, Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach's home State.

Mrs. Truman, in a floor-length gown of deep plum colored crepe, stood between her two hostesses. A cluster of red roses at the waistline blended happily with the deep purple orchid fastened to her shoulder.

Mrs. Schwellenbach, in black lace, and Mrs. Anderson, wearing a gown of gray crepe with slightly draped skirt, both had corsages of rose colored camellias. Mrs. Clifford Davis, president of the club, also welcomed the guests.

As chairman of assistant hostesses it was Mrs. Edward Burke's pleasant duty to see that the ladies took their places at the tea tables at the appointed time, she had assisting her Mrs. Tom Connally, wife of the Senator from Texas.

At the Tea and Coffee Table

MRS. FRED VINSON, wife of the Chief Justice, in a black frock and feather hat, took her turn at the tea table, and Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General, in claret colored satin and a hat fashioned of layers of satin of the same shade combined with blue, had a steady stream of customers for coffee. Also presiding for a time were Mrs. John W. Snyder, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Carl Hatch, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. George Mesta, in black net patterned in cire ribbon, and Mrs. Averell Harriman, wearing a slim black satin suit with pale pink violets on her black hat.

Miss Margaret Truman had come with her mother and she and Miss Jane Lingo stayed on most of the afternoon. Both girls wore green, Miss Truman's ankle length gown made with a draped bustle back and worn with a gold matelasse hat—her "circus hat" she calls it—trimmed with a tiny bronze feather

The latest fashions were on parade yesterday. There was Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, in a rustling dark blue taffeta frock with a pouffed peplum and ballerina length skirt, and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Justice, topping her trim satin suit of battleship gray with a hat of the same shade. Mrs. John Steelman wore a spill of blue velvet roses on her blonde hair, and Mrs. Jay LeFevre sported two natural colored birds of paradise for a hat.

Cabinet, Court Represented

MRS. JULIUS KRUG, looking smart and soignee in black with a single pink rose on her hat, was serving punch. Others there were Mrs. John L. Sullivan, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Wallace White, Mrs. Charles Ross, Mrs. James H. Foskett.

Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, wife of the new Postmaster General, and Mrs. David Morse took turns at the punch bowl. Mrs. Curtis Shears told me she had heard that the delicious squares of cakes and sandwiches were all made of soy and whole grain flour in line with President Truman's conservation policy. Mrs. Justin Miller found many friends as she made the circuit; and Mrs. William H. Watson, smart in bronze beaded brown satin, was in a group which included Mrs. Frederick Witt, all in black, and Mrs. Adolph Buquor, whose costume combined black and white.

Shocking pink ostrich fashioned Mrs. Parker West's hat, and Mrs. Morris Cafritz wore her white hat trimmed with pale blue apples and pink blossoms.

Then—to go on—there were Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Emil Hurja in a gray satin suit; Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, introducing Mrs. Horace Albright, here for a few days from New York; Mrs. Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Mrs. Gordon Young, Miss Reathel Odum, Mrs. Charles F. Martin, and the two Mrs. Thomases—Mrs. Albert from Texas, Mrs. Elbert from Utah, whose husband, the Senator, has just been named his State's "favorite son."

March of Dimes Opened

EARLIER YESTERDAY members of the women's committee for the March of Dimes infantile paralysis fund, made a special broadcast from the oval room of the White House with Margaret Truman introducing Mrs. Fred Vinson on the radio.

In the group of 60 or more were Mrs. Ralph Edwards and Mrs. John Baker, a physiotherapist. Lady Inverchapel, wife of the British Ambassador, who had been stricken with the dread disease in childhood, was to speak over the hookup, but had lost her voice. In her place was Lady Balfour, wife of the British Minister.

Not a Pennant Will Flutter

Gobs Create Gala Decor Of 'Sea Pirate' Days for Navy Relief Ball Tonight

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

USUALLY THE NAVY, mildly afflicted with innocuous desuetude, depends on signal flags to brighten their festivities. But not a pennant will flutter in the Statler tonight at the 1948 Navy Ball.

The local gobs have gone to town creating an imaginative, highly dramatic decor. They have sneaked back historically to the War of 1812 when sailors, like pirates, slugged it out—fist to fist. They've corraled dozens of gold boarding sabers, 1812 Navy bayonets (you tell 'em from old army bayonets by the fish scales carved on their handles), clustered them together on black lacquer shields, tied sturdy boarding pikes into sheaves.

The boxes are decorated with life-preservers lettered with names of our famous fighting ships, while the Trumans' loge has a special brace printed with the presidential yachts' names "Mayflower" and "Williamsburg." There's even a special insignia for this particular ball. If the regular officer's cap badge had been chosen it would have excluded both enlisted men and marines. So Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Navy for Air, and connoisseur on matters pertaining to uniforms, discovered a suitable insignia in a copy of the Navy's first uniform regulations printed in 1841. It's a design for the then current full dress uniform belt buckle, a rather gay looking eagle perched on the stock of the Navy anchor, pleasantly surrounded with laurel and stars.

Enlisted Men Honor Guests

SIX ENLISTED men, representing millions of their comrades, top the guest of honor list. Three have the Navy Cross, three were seriously wounded, all have outstanding combat records. They are Chief Radioman Charles Stover, Staff Sergt. R. A. Puglia of the Marines, Chief Ordnance Mate First Class John Stephens, Fire Controlman First Class Milton T. Booney, Gunnersmate Third Class William Parker—and, of course, the ladies of their choice.

Among the more ornate wearers of "scrambled eggs" who've come to town specially for the occasion are Admiral and Mrs. Henry K. Hewitt. The Admiral commanded the Naval escort in the Normandy invasion, the Sicilian and south of France invasions, and is now United States naval representative at the United Nations.

Admiral and Mrs. Thomas C. Kinkaid will be there, too. He commanded the Seventh Fleet in the Pacific, now commands the Eastern Sea Frontier and lives at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in a charming eighteenth century house designed by the famous architect Bulfinch. Admiral Richard Conolly, commander of our European Fleet, is back from the Mediterranean on a brief visit, too.

Metropolitan in Baltimore

MRS. CLARENCE MACKAY, who sang at the Metropolitan as Anna Case, will sing a song or two, provided she recovers from the Virus X which is sweeping New York. She's the handsome stepmama of Mrs. Irving Berlin. Speaking of the Metropolitan Opera, the company's scheduled to give three performances in Baltimore's Lyric Theatre on March 9, 29 and 30. The programs are Jan Pearce in "Rigoletto," Ezio Pinza in "Don Giovanni" and Jussi Bjoerling in "La Boheme." Most of the tickets are sold out already, but Mrs. Higginson Rogers, who runs the Lafayette Hotel Ticket Agency, still has a few boxes and seats.

New Spring Fashions Modeled at Benefit

By Peggy Preston

FASHION, like news, travel fast. Spring styles which we viewed in the designers' salons in New York last week are already in Washington shops.

Several of the outstanding costumes in the New York shows were modeled here yesterday at the benefit fashion show staged at the Mayflower by the Jewish Consumptives Relief Society, Washington Ladies' Auxiliary.

The show, entitled "Weekend at the Waldorf," was presented by Pasternak's and included clothing for all hours. There were handsome new suits with tiny tops and swinging skirts; greatcoats and coats cut on the popular princess lines; afternoon dresses and evening gowns shown with a new collection of luxurious furs. In addition there were several outfits from the shop's lingerie department, including gowns, robes and lounging costumes.

ONE of the noteworthy coats which we saw in New York and again yesterday was a pin-check wool, cut on princess lines with elbow length cape attached at the collar. Not so new, but still a great favorite with many is the greatcoat—one of which was on display, made of pale beige wool.

The evening collection featured new prints, worn with furs, which arrived via air mail from the designer's room just in time for the afternoon showing. New, almost pastel shades of fur are fashion news for spring, designed to look equally well at home over a pale chiffon evening gown or a light colored wool suit this spring.

"CHIFFON" mink is the name of one of the newest fur shades and was shown yesterday in a beautiful cape jacket and again in a stole. The latter, styled as expertly as a coat, may be worn over either dress, suit or top coat.

Because the garments now being delivered are from the early spring collections, the general color scheme for the show was muted and on the pastel side. Later in the season fabrics will be dyed in bolder colors, with turquoise and tangerine due for an important revival.

At Soroptomists' Luncheon

Clubwomen Tell of 'Good Works'

By Genevieve Reynolds

HOW do club women spend their time when not listening to speeches, passing resolutions or eating the proverbial luncheon dished out at organizations' functions? A ready reply from the city's Altrusa, Zonta, Quota and Business and Professional Women's Clubs yesterday indicated concrete projects on international good will and education.

It all came out when Washington Soroptimist Club held an "Inter-Club Relations" luncheon at the Willard Hotel and asked the heads of other organizations to come tell all.

Reporting for Zonta, Miss Mabel Strider, who was subbing for Mrs. Dorothy Scates, president, reported that scholarship gifts is the organization's main project. She recalled how Zonta started out granting loans to worthy students and ended up giving outright scholarship. A portion of the national dues also goes into the scholarship fund, which now has grown to $16,000.

On the local front, she said the club raised funds to provide glasses for people who could not afford to purchase them. This was handled through the Episcopal, Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital. In addition, shoes were provided for 125 children at Central Union Mission.

"Part of education is knowing when and how to help people," said Miss Strider, pointing out that last year local Zontians sent 160 Christmas packages to people in war devastated Europe.

Supporting Belgian Orphan

Miss Augusta Clawson, Altrusa president, told how the Washington Club is supporting one orphan in Belgium, plus heavily contributing to International Altrusa's active international relations program.

"International relations are Altrusa's chief interest," she explained. "Our main project now is giving $15,000 in scholarships to Latin American women. This grant in aid is to add a few of the extras for living and traveling to students already living here."

Incidentally, Miss Clawson, head of one of the Government cafeterias now on strike, says that she has to get up every morning at 4:45 to see that meals are ready.

Although Quota here boasts only 35 members, the group carries on an active service program. Last year members pledged $600 to the Children's Hospital Building Fund, sent cash gifts as they do each year to all patients in Aged Home in Georgetown, and mailed around 150 CARE packages to Europe, according to Miss Margaret Ellis, president.

Each Tuesday night members serve coffee, tea and sandwiches during the "coffee hour" at the YWCA here. In addition, the Quotanians contribute to the organization's international scholarship and international relations programs.

Dr. Irma Gene Nevins, president of the D. C. Business and Professional Women's Club, said her organization also had active international projects and scholarships to aid women obtain college or business training. "Now we are concentrating on building a club house and alerting people to their obligation to exercise their right of citizenship," she said.

Since Soroptimist Club limits its entire luncheon program to one hour, there was no time for Mrs. Rose Robinson Cowen to reveal the accomplishments of her own group. Miss Marjorie Webster, chairman of the club's international relations committee, presided.

Club Hears UNESCO Talk

Four non-members of the United Nations—Italy, Hungary, Austria and Switzerland—were admitted into UNESCO at the recent conference held in Mexico City. So reported Dr. Luther Evans, librarian, Library of Congress, in a talk yesterday before members of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., following a luncheon meeting held in the clubhouse.

He pointed out that membership in UNESCO will help prepare these countries for participation in U. N.

As for the $64 questions as to whether or not Russia eventually would join UNESCO, Dr. Evans expressed a doubt that the Soviet would join in the forseeable future, but explained that it was important to carry on the work with or without Russia.

"The Russians balk at the UNESCO stipulation of freedom of communications," he said.

After outlining the organization and purpose of UNESCO, Dr. Evans told of the proceedings of the recent conference which he attended in Mexico City.

He told how several private organizations cooperating with UNESCO had contributed toward educational projects in the war devastated countries during the past two years. This went not only for school, books, paper, pencils but reclamation of teachers—such as giving expert advice on new teaching methods

Emphasizing that UNESCO will stress freedom of communication with the $300,000 alloted to it for that purpose, Dr. Evans listed what he termed the three most important aspects of the program. These are exchange of persons such as students, professors, technicians; removal of obstacles to free flow of ideas in both radio and press; affirmation of program through radio, press, motion pictures and other mediums to teach international understanding.

The speaker, who is the United States delegate to UNESCO, called upon the Chevy Chase women to ponder ways whereby people could be taught in international understanding and good will.

Ilka Chase to Be Commentator At United Nations Club Ball

Ilka Chase, well known writer and wit, is coming down from New York with her husband, Dr. Norton Brown, to add spice to the United Nations Club Ball at the Statler Saturday evening, as commentator in the "Miss United Nations" pageant, highlight of the entertainment program planned by Meredith Howard, president of the club.

A brilliant audience will cheer the 44 contestants for the 1948 crown as they pass before the judges with their escorts, the Air Force band playing national anthems in the massing of the colors.

Among those who have made reservations during the past few days are Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison, whose daughter Anne Churchill Harrison is to participate as "Miss United States"; the Ambassador of Poland and Mme. Winiewicz, the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Ivanissevich, the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thorr, whose daughter, Margret, will represent her country; the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin, the Ambassador of The Netherlands and Mme. van Kleffens, the Ambassador of Siam and Princess Wan Waithayakon, the Ambassador of Haiti, Joseph D. Charles; the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Hubert, the Minister of Liberia and Mrs. King, the Ambassador of Yugoslavia and Senora de Carnevali, and the Minister of the Philippines, Narciso Ramos.

One half the proceeds from the ball will be used by American Overseas Aid for the immediate relief of war-stricken children in Europe and the Far East.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

How can spots by water and whisky be removed from a red rayon moire dress, so that the watermarks in the material are brought back? Also, is it safe to use spot removers on this material? E. E. K.

Water marks, when once removed from moire, cannot be brought back. This is a factory process and there is no way to restore them to the material by home methods. I would not suggest using spot removers on this material. The removers you mention may not disturb the moire effect, but they might leave a ring which would be difficult to remove. I suggest you take this dress to a reliable professional dry cleaner to be cleaned.

Would it be possible to bleach nylon or rayon tailored curtains that I have replaced with white ruffled curtains so they could be used on French doors in the same rooms? They are an ecru shade now. J. W. G.

The curtains can be bleached by placing them in a solution of sodium perborate and soap suds. Use four tablespoons perborate to a pint of soapy water. Allow to remain in the bleach for half hour or longer and rinse thoroughly in several rinse waters. Or, you could use one of the commercial dye or color removers sold where dyes are on sale. Follow the directions which come with the color remover you buy.

How can I successfully remove an inkstain from a green upholstered chair? I have tried sponging it with plain water and rubbing it with cleaning fluid, but both methods have been in vain. N. H. P.

It is very difficult to remove ink from upholstery because it is impossible to get a pad under the stain to absorb the ink as it is driven from the fabric. Also, there are so many different kinds of ink that usually several methods must be tried before it is removed. Start with the simplest first. Dampen the spot and work cornstarch or talcum powder into the stain. If the powder takes up ink, brush away and repeat. When the dry powder fails to take up more ink, make the cornstarch into a paste with one part water and one part alcohol and apply again. Let dry and brush off. Now, if some ink remains and the material is washable, rub one of the soapless shampoos into the stain. Rinse thoroughly and quickly with clear water. Continue as long as ink is removed. Be sure to rinse thoroughly with clear water and sponge in such a way as to avoid spreading the ring. If these treatments fail to remove all of the ink, sponge it with a half and half mixture of household ammonia and hydrogen peroxide. This is a mild bleach and so should not be allowed to remain on the material more than a few minutes. Also, be sure to test the effect of the solution on the color in an inconspicuous spot.

The seriousness of ink stains on upholstery and rugs can be considerably lessened if, while the spot is still wet, cornstarch, corn meal or talcum powder is dusted into it to absorb the ink and reduce the chance of its spreading and penetrating the padding under the upholstery. Brush away when the absorbent will absorb no more ink and repeat.

Would a cast aluminum or cast iron small article be cheaper to produce? L. B. H.

I'm sorry, but you haven't given us enough information to answer your question. If you will write us a more explicit letter, we will be glad to do our best to help you.

I saw in your column the other day that someone wanted to know how to remove formula stains from infants' clothing. I am a graduate nurse and specialize in infants' nursing. I always insist on laundering their clothes to prevent stains. When any formula is spilled on the clothes, remove them at once and soak in cold water for at least one hour. After a good rubbing, wash them in mild soap or flakes and warm water. If treated in this way, baby's clothes will never be stained with formula. Hot water sets the stains. L. M.

I have a four-piece walnut veneer bedroom suite which I would like to paint, preparatory to doing it in Peter Hunt style. Is it necessary for me to sand it down well before applying the first undercoat of paint? This would involve a great deal of hard work, and I am wondering if I could just wash it down well with turpentine and then apply an undercoat. How many coats of paint are necessary for this job? Can you advise me regarding the kind of paint to use for the undercoat as well as the other coats of paint? J. J. K.

If the old finish is in good condition (not scaling or cracked) it will not be necessary to remove it or to use one of the "undercoaters" sold by paint stores. Just remove oil, grease and furniture polish with a cloth saturated in turpentine, as you plan to do. If wax has been used, repeat this treatment several times to insure complete removal of the wax. Follow immediately with a clean cloth wiping until the surface is dry. Sand the old finish lightly with No. 2/0 or 3/0 sandpaper to dull the gloss and provide adhesion, then dust off and paint.

Use enamel for the painting. If the new color is fairly similar to the old finish in value (light or dark) one coat of enamel will probably suffice. However, if you are changing to a light color, two coats will probably be required for complete hiding.

Can you tell me how to get lipstick spots off an aqua marquisette evening gown? J. A. J.

Work lard or petroleum jelly into the spots. Allow to remain awhile to soften stains. Then sponge with cleaning fluid, holding the spots on an absorbent pad. If trace of color remains, sponge with diluted alcohol—1 cup denatured alcohol to 2 cups water.

Your Baby and Mine

The 'Colic' Mystery

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Mothers talk much less of colic these days than they did 20 years years ago. There was a time when all babies were expected to have colic. Then another period when all colic was called hunger. And now the present period when the opinion is that some babies even on a good formula do, without apparent cause, have some difficulty digesting their food. This indigestion is termed colic. Probably there would have been less colic in the early days had mothers known how to promote a better breast supply; less colic in the middle period if formulas had been better adapted to the child's needs, and still less today if along with all the wealth of knowledge of how to feed babies, more mothers would breast-feed them.

What is deplorable is for a mother to accept the idea that colic has some mystical time period; and figuratively fold her hands and wait until the six weeks or three months period has passed. When the baby is suffering, there should be a continuous effort to determine the causes of that suffering and to end it.

The nursing baby may cry from hunger—and act colicky—in the late afternoon. The breast supply is materially diminished at that time. A complementary bottle may be helpful until the breast supply is stabilized and more generous.

With the artificially fed, when the colic is a late afternoon phenomenon, as it so often is, it may be due to fatigue or to a formula excessive in size and richness. The baby's digestive apparatus may go on strike late in the day after orgies of eating at too frequent intervals. The formula should be suspected until it is proved guiltless.

Too little food will certainly cause the baby to be fretful and he may be accused of being a colic-baby. Comparison of his formula and those suitable for a baby of his age and weight may indicate in what way it might be changed and improved. Green stools with mucus are often attributed to indigestion when more food might end them.

The weekly gains in weight of both the bottle and breast-fed infant might help to clear up the mystery of the colic. The baby who gains prodigiously, and the one who gains little or not at all, both have good reason to proclaim their woes to the world.

When the baby is crying and uncomfortable he should be comforted, kept warm and quiet, until such time as the cause of his difficulty is discovered. It would be most unjust for his protectors to penalize the baby for the mistakes of feeding for which they are to blame.

Wife Has Nervous Breakdown, Children Show Strain, as Man Drinks Heavily, Ignoring Her Anxiety and Paying No Heed to Priest's Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Which is worse, to continue trying to raise three children with a father who drinks far too much, too often, or take a step against the teachings of my church and divorce him?

We have been married nearly eight years and the children are 4, 5, and 6 years of age. They love their father and in earlier years when he would fail to come home at the hour expected they were agog with questions.

But by now they have seen him drunk so many times that they know the answer, and it seems to be deeply affecting the 5-year-old boy. His teacher complains of defiance and disobedience and the school principal says, "Something seems to be bothering him and he wants to be a tough guy to cover it up."

Worried Wife's Devotion Wanes

MY HUSBAND seems to have no respect for the counsel given us by our parish priests. He will not take treatment for alcoholics and although I threatened him with divorce two months ago, that hasn't helped either.

I've become bitter the last few years and try as I will—and I have tried hard—I cannot recapture the devotion I once felt for him. Despite the strain, my health held up until last October, but then I had a nervous breakdown and now my doctor has ordered me to take sleeping capsules on these otherwise sleepless nights.

In September, 1946, a lawyer advised me to keep a record of my husband's drinking, which I did for one year exactly and during that period he had 51 drinking days to his credit. 'Tis such a bad example for the children. Should I try to raise them alone? What would be best? Please answer.

B. W.

Priest Clarifies Wife's Dilemma

DEAR B. W.: Your references to religion indicate a Catholic background, hence I have discussed the story with a priest who is thoroughly conversant with the letter and purpose of church dogma covering Catholic marriage.

This I did primarily to explore the question of whether you would be defying the teachings of your church if you were to separate from or divorce your husband, to shield the children from his demoralizing example.

The priest's comment was brief, compassionate and illuminating. He spoke first of the human problem. These are his words, "It would be best to separate from the drinking husband and rear the children away from his example and influence,"—if the facts are as stated here.

Church Does Not Forbid Separation

NEXT he said positively, "The church does not oppose either separation or divorce of married persons, when circumstances justify."

Justifying circumstances, he explained, are those in which the general welfare—the mental, physical and/or moral health—of a conscientious spouse and/or young children is being manifestly damaged by the other person's addiction, wilful or irresponsible, to pernicious misconduct.

If such conditions arise in Catholic marriage and the offender seems incorrigible, deaf to appeals and scornful of help, the church sanctions two courses of legal succor for the abused, and only one course requires ecclesiastical endorsement in advance.

To explain: One course is legal separation, and assuming the plaintiff ventures this method of safeguarding self and children from the offender's destructive character, there is no religious obligation to screen that intention through church authority.

Divorce Requires Bishop's Sanction

THE SECOND course is absolute divorce, as legally defined, and if this more drastic defense seems in order, required Catholic procedure is to have one's bishop study the case and endorse the plaintiff's petition before suit is filed. And the plaintiff may appeal directly to the bishop in writing or have the parish priest act as intermediary.

However, in re divorce: What is absolute divorce by legal definition is otherwise construed by the church,—i. e., as complete physical divorcement, yes; which even so doesn't abrogate the irrevocably binding moral finality of Catholic marriage vows, if by the terms of canon law the contract was sacramentally valid to start.

In brief, the church may sanction divorce for serious cause; but second marriage never, during the other person's life, except in cases of annulment based on proof that the supposedly sacramental union had been null and void from the beginning; i. e., due to failure to meet the full requirements of canon law.

D. C. X-Ray Plan Lauded By Experts

Washington's Chest X-Ray Survey campaign was viewed here yesterday by eight of the Nation's tuberculosis control experts, and found "admirably organized."

The visitors, attending the sixth annual conference on tuberculosis control, are regional officers of the tuberculosis control division, United States Public Health Service.

They toured local operations of the mass chest X-ray survey underway here with Dr. Francis J. Weber, chief tuberculosis control officer, United States Public Health Service.

The local drive to search by X-ray the chests of upwards of 600,000 workers and residents here by June 15 began January 12.

Dr. R. I. Pierce, of Chicago, one of yesterday's visitors, was "greatly impressed."

"Only by seeing how it was working out here can I get an idea of how it can be planned for larger cities, like Chicago," said Dr. Pierce.

Dr. Paul Joliet, of Kansas City, Mo., whose region takes in Minneapolis and St. Paul, both of which have conducted similar campaigns, reported those cities reached approximately 80 per cent of the adult population in their drives.

Others inspecting operations included Drs. Alonzo Brand, Richmond; Russell Teague, Philadelphia; John Hozier, New Orelans; Edward Blomquist, San Francisco; Willoughby Rothrock, Austin, Tex., and P. Amoral Pamplona, San Antonio, Tex.

Koepfle reported that by yesterday some 1700 persons were processed through the two X-ray units in operation there since January 13. The Cornelius Printing Co. of Silver Spring qualified for 100 per cent participation award, he announced.

Employes of the Silver Spring post office, led by Postmaster William E. Bowman, were X-rayed at the Silver Spring Armory yesterday. Other groups who have promised 100 per cent participation include the National Electrical Machine Shops and the Suburban National Bank of Silver Spring.

The county campaign is sponsored by the Montgomery County Tuberculosis Association and county and State health departments. Service is free and unembarrassing, with all results treated confidentially.

All persons 15 years of age and older are invited to appear for X-ray, preferably at the Silver Spring Armory unit. The units are presently located at:

U. S. Note Protests Russians' Arrest Of Army Officers

Vienna, Jan. 21 (NYHT).—The American high command in Austria in a sharp protest accused Russia of having violated Hungarian sovereignty in the arrests last week of two officers of the United States military attache's office in Budapest.

The note, sent by Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, American commander here, charged that Russian troops without authority and explanation ignored the diplomatic immunity the officers enjoyed, made the arrests and then detained the Americans from last Wednesday afternoon until Thursday morning.

The officers, Lieut. Col. Peter Kopscak and Bernard Thielen, were stopped in Papa, Hungary, near a Russian air headquarters en route to Budapest in an American legation sedan. They were removed to Vienna under armed guard and were denied permission to communicate with either the Budapest legation or the United States headquarters here.

Rezoning Bid For Housing Is Approved

A rezoning request to permit construction of two apartment projects totaling $11,500,000 was among 12 petitions granted yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners at public hearings in Hyattsville.

Largest of the apartment projects is one at New Hampshire ave., north of Piney Branch rd. near Takoma Park, which will have 1500 units and cost approximately $10,500,000. Approximately 17 acres of the tract are in Prince Georges while 92 acres are in Montgomery County. The Montgomery section was rezoned about three months ago. The property is owned by W. W. Rapley.

The second apartment project, for which rezoning was asked by Ralph W. Powers, attorney for the owner, is in Chestnut Hills subdivision, Beltsville, on the west side of Baltimore blvd. north of the Department of Agriculture Research Laboratories. It will consist of 104 apartment units to cost approximately one million dollars and was granted subject to construction that conforms to that of the Federal buildings nearby.

Oath Refusal Costs Union Chance to Bargain for 60,000

A union whose officers refused to sign anti-Communist oaths thereby lost a three-year battle over bargaining rights for 60,000 California cannery workers.

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday dismissed the petitions of the CIO Food, Tobacco and Agricultural workers for an investigation of a union representation election last summer. The union had been contesting for bargaining rights with the AFL Cannery Workers Council of the teamsters union.

In the election, the AFL unit polled a plurality, but the NLRB held up certification because of some challenged ballots. It added that further investigation would be necessary to make the election determinative.

However, it said, it was stopped from making such further investigation because the union which petitioned for the investigation had failed to qualify for receiving board services.

His job will be to coordinate information from Arlington, State and Federal sources on county educational needs and to advise the school board on steps necessary to put recommendations into effect.

During its meeting last night at James Monroe School, the board pointed out that Braun will be expected to organize a comprehensive census of county children by age groups, study the physical status of county school buildings and propose a plan for a building program.

The appointee, who was unanimously approved by the board last night, was for sometime associated with Dr. John Fowlkes of the University of Wisconsin in school surveys in Wisconsin, Minnesota and in Fort Worth, Tex.

Home Buyer Sues Real Estate Firm, Charging Fraud

A Navy veteran yesterday filed a $19,500 damage suit against a local realty firm, charging breach of contract, fraud and misrepresentation in the sale of a home.

The suit, brought by Paul J. Raimondi of 4502 38th pl., Brentwood, Md., named as defendant Morris I. and Rose Schlein, as partners in the Federal Finance & Realty Co., and the Federal Contracting Co., and also R. B. Ferris, all of 915 New York ave. nw.

Raimondi said he purchased his Brentwood home in August, 1946, for $8500 and the following January was informed the price had risen to $10,000. After signing a mortgage, Raimondi said, he was permitted to see the inside of the house for the first time.

He said he found the building was improperly constructed, had no stove or refrigerator, as contracted for, and cracked walls and other defects. Attorney Josiah Lyman said he was seeking $3500 from each defendant for actual damage and $3000 in punitive damage.

Whitehead Loses In Bid to Leave St. Elizabeths

District Court Justice F. Dickinson Letts has refused to order the release of George F. Whitehead, 46, convicted in 1943 of Mann Act violations, from St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Whitehead, former operator of the famous Connecticut Avenue Hopkins Institute, sought his release on a writ of habeas corpus. He had been committed to St. Elizabeth's in 1945 while serving a 1 to 4-year term at Lorton Reformatory.

After hearing testimony Monday from both Whitehead and Dr. Bernard Cruvant of the hospital's staff, Justice Letts ruled that Whitehead was still mentally ill and remanded him to the hospital for further treatment.

One on the Aisle—

All That for 40 Gs

Cadavers Litter Keith's Screen

By Richard L. Coe

EXACTLY WHAT GOES ON in Keith's "Out of the Past" I couldn't tell you if you put me on the rack. But a good deal of suspenseful derring-do does go on and it's engrossing to watch.

The picture has been adapted by Geoffrey Homes from his novel, "Build My Gallows High." This is another of those contemporary classics unknown to your reporter, but the writing of it must have required barrels of coffee and concentration.

Robert Mitchum plays a former private detective who's summoned to the Lake Tahoe estate of a one-time employer, a racketeer now in trouble over his tax returns. Mitchum had once double-crossed the man—Kirk Douglas—over a girl.

This girl is quite a character. Her immaculate enamel covers a soul that makes Lady Macbeth's seem like that of a dreamy schoolgirl. Jane Greer, in this part, has almost killed the racketeer when we first hear of her and he wants to get her back—as well as the $40,000 he thinks she's stolen from him.

That paltry $40,000 leads to endless complications. Jane seems like a pretty noble type until Mitchum sees her kill an old pal and then cons to the fact that she's had the $40,000 all the while. Before it's over you've had a gander at one corpse stuffed into a closet, another tossed into a river and a third lying prone in its own living room.

Inflation Note

Jane's a mighty smart cookie, you think, getting rid of all sorts of people and making herself the boss lady. It is to the director's credit—Jacques Tourneur—that you scarcely give a thought to the fact that this is a pack of trouble for a mere 40 grand. The wad wouldn't last long.

Despite the maze of incidents, the flashbacks and general confusion, "Out of the Past" is one of those things that keeps you alert. The settings are good and the players are fine.

Mitchum and Miss Greer are hardbitten as they should be and Kirk Douglas is adeptly playing the same role he does in the Warner's recent "I Walk Alone." The most interesting of the cast, though, is Dickie Moore as a young deaf mute, whose relationship to Mitchum is more than vague. But it's a good performance from the one-time movie moppet and he's turned into a nice-looking lad, which is more than can be said for most of child stars when they mature.

Two Jews Wounded In Yehiam Attack

Jerusalem, Jan. 21 (AP).—Arab snipers wounded two Jews in a renewal of attacks today on the Jewish settlement of Yehiam near the Lebanese frontier, military sources said.

There was little major activity elsewhere in Palestine's Jewish-Arab warfare.

Three Jews and five Arabs, including two women, were killed during the day in scattered incidents over the country. The unofficial death count rose to 931 since the November 29 United Nations decision on partition of Palestine.

The homes of two British businessmen now visiting in England were blasted in the fashionable Katamon district of Jerusalem at dawn. Four women narrowly escaped injury.

A reliable informant said the Haifa refinery, one of the main sources of petroleum for the Middle East, will begin production tomorrow after idleness of more than three weeks because of the Arab-Jewish strife.

Immigration Port Plan Rejected by British

Lake Success, Jan. 21 (AP).—Britain tonight rejected the recommendation of the United Nations Assembly for opening a major port in Palestine by February 1 to permit the beginning of large-scale Jewish immigration.

Britain's refusal to comply with this key provision of the Palestine partition plan was placed before a secret meeting of the U. N. Palestine Partition Commission by Sir Alexander Cadogan.

The British declaration thus made it clear that the commission would be unable to implement the first step in the partitioning of the Holy Land.

Cadogan, replying to four specific questions submitted by the five-member commission, also declared Britain had no intention of increasing the present immigration quota of 1500 a month between now and termination of the British mandate now scheduled for May 15 "or earlier."

Union Leaders Must Renew Non-Red Oaths

By The Associated Press

Officers of the 65,000 local and international unions throughout the Nation must renew their non-Communist oaths as their terms of office expire if they want to continue using the machinery of the National Labor Relations Board, it was learned yesterday.

NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham disclosed that by a strict interpretation of the Taft-Hartley Act each union automatically becomes a noncomplying organization as the terms of its officers expire.

That means that the officers of the more than 200 Nation-wide unions and the hundreds of thousands of local union officers all must submit new affidavits disavowing Communism at the start of new terms. Even those reelected to the same offices must do the same. Failure to do so closes the door of the NLRB to the union or the local branch.

Terms of officers of a vast number of unions expired December 31, for example, but frequently new leaders may not officially be sworn until late in January.

"In that case we consider the old officers to be still in control and don't immediately find the union to be in non-compliance," Denham said. "But once the new officers are seated, we have to get the affidavits. Any other interpretation would be out of the question."

The terms of the AFL's only officers—President William Green and Secretary-Treasurer George Meany,—begin with the October convention and run until next fall.

CIO President Philip Murray has refused to sign the non-communist affidavits but his position affects only the steelworkers, which he also heads.

Requests Denied

Funds Lack Hits Schools In Fairfax

Fairfax County's school building program has temporarily stalled for lack of funds.

School Superintendent W. T. Woodson yesterday said the State Board of Education has denied four requests for literary fund loans totaling $855,000, because "funds are not available."

The requests were for construction of new schools at Simms Corner and Hollin Hall and additions at Annandale and Burke.

Woodson said that, at the direction of the county school board, he has asked the State to try to obtain the funds from the Teachers' Retirement Fund.

The State Board has not yet acted on a more recent request for $131,000 to build an addition at Groveton.

Denial of these requests will not, however, affect loans already approved this year totaling $1,524,000, Woodson said. Work is now under way on two new schools at Oak st. and Falls Church (Negro) and on additions at high schools in Fairfax, Falls Church, Mount Vernon, the Negro regional high school in Manassas, and elementary schools in Centerville, Franconia, Woodlawn and Vienna (Negro).

Va. Power Company's Proposal Accepted

By The Associated Press

The power commission approved yesterday a proposal of Northern Virginia Power Co. to dispose of $426,130.28 excess of recorded amounts over original cost remaining in its electric plant accounts.

The commission also approved similar proposals by Potomac Light & Power Co. to dispose of an excess of $298,872.35.

Northern Virginia Power serves 15 communities in Virginia and Potomac Light & Power serves 20 West Virginia communities. Home offices of both companies are at Hagerstown, Md.

Fairfax County Board Votes to Seek Change In Virginia Law on Annexation of Territory

Fairfax County yesterday voted to seek new state legislation governing annexation of territory by Virginia cities and counties.

The Fairfax Board of Supervisors voted to: (1) appropriate $50 to the League of Virginia Counties for representation at the General Assembly to seek a law giving jurisdictions and people concerned a voice in annexations; and (2) ask Fairfax legislators to support such a bill.

Under existing law, cities, towns and counties can annex adjoining territory by proving their case in circuit court. No consent of the county or area involved is necessary.

The board yesterday also:

(1) Deferred action for the second time on a request of the Health Department for $2150 additional funds to carry on a program of giving physical examinations to school children;

(2) Tabled a letter from the Alexandria Hospital Committee asking if Fairfax would underwrite all county emergency patients admitted to the hospital;

(3) Set February 25 as date for the spring road meeting, at which citizens may complain about road conditions.

The jury returned seven indictments, including one charging Mrs. Della Johnson Stumm, 48, of Martinsburg with the fatal shooting of Bruce Orem, also of Martinsburg, at a Kabletown farm home last January 10.

By Jack Bell

THE ANNUAL REUNION of the Arlington, Va., chapter of the Izaak Walton League took place Monday night, when more than 100 members, their wives, friends and guests dined together at the Terrace Dining Room, National Airport.

After the usual toasts, followed by the installation of the chapter's newly elected officers, Toastmaster George Groves introduced the honored guest of the evening, Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.).

Senator Robertson, coauthor of the Pittman-Robertson Act, and chairman of the United States Wildlife Committee, pointed out the highly beneficial influance the Izaak Walton League is exerting both in the restoration and conservation of the Nation's natural resources.

The Senator gave an interesting account of his early sporting days that led to his creation of Virginia's first Fish and Game Commission and the organization of the first chapter of the Izaak Walton League in the State.

Verne D. Close, president of the Washington chapter of the Izaak Walton League, announced that the chapter invites those interested in the outdoors to an evening of entertainment, Friday at 8:15 p. m., in the auditorium of the Department of Commerce, 14th and E sts. nw. Admission is by ticket that can be obtained free at your favorite sport shop.

The program includes the movie, "Life Blood of the Land," and talks by James Birchfield, newspaper columnist, and Edward Munns, chief of the Division of Forest Influences, United States Forest Service.

Geoff Brown Eliminates Moylan in Aussie Tennis

Melbourne, Jan. 21 (AP).—The last foreigner was eliminated from the Australian singles tennis championships today when Eddie Moylan of San Francisco went down before Geoff Brown, an alternate on the last Australian Davis Cup team, by scores of 7—5, 6—2, 3—6, 7—5 in the quarterfinals.

Bill Sidwell, who was left off the '47 Aussie Cup squad, reached the semifinals with an upset 6—2, 5&7, 6—2, 6—0 victory over Colin Long, who with John Bromwich defeated the United States doubles pair of Jack Kramer and Ter Schroeder in last summer's challenge round.

Bromwich reached the semifinals by beating Frank Sedgman, 6—2, 6—4, 6—4, and Adrian Quist downed Bob McCarthy, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3, to round out the singles bracket.

Coal Miners Leave Jobs in Kentucky

Paintsville, Ky., Jan. 21 (AP).—All truck mines and coal loading ramps in Johnson County shut down today after United Mine Workers declared a "holiday" and picketed nonunion operations.

Operators said about 2000 miners, both union and nonunion, employed at 40 truck mines and 11 ramps in the county, were idle and the movement of coal had completely stopped. Charlie Bailey, an official of the UMW in Paintsville, said miners at the small truck mines would ask "some wage scale."

Zoldak Rejects Pact, Browns Offer No Raise

New York, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Southpaw Pitcher Sam Zoldak returned his 1948 contract unsigned to the St. Louis Browns today because he was offered "the same thing they gave me last year."

The 25-year-old Zoldak, who lives in Brooklyn, won nine games and dropped 10 last season for a .474 percentage, the highest mark posted by any regular St. Louis pitcher. Last year he reportedly received $6,000.

'Ate' and 'Eight' Prove $125 Apart

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 21 (AP).—The difference between "ate" and "eight" was more than a matter of a few letters here today for Fred E. Carlson. It cost him $125.

Charged in police court with drunken driving, Carlson said he told arresting officers when asked if he had been drinking that he "had ate."

The officers reported he said he "had just had eight."

Orioles Present Their Side of Back Fence Tiff

Baltimore, Jan. 21 .—A circuit court had before it today a reply to contentions by residents of the Municipal Stadium area that the Baltimore Orioles' baseball games constitute an "intolerable nuisance."

Attorneys for the Orioles and the city yesterday filed a request for dismissal of an injunction suit that would prevent the International League club from using the bowl for its home games.

The respondents contended the stadium had been built for both professional and amateur exhibitions, and had been leased the baseball team in order to meet the expenses of maintenance.

They added that since the section was not residential when the arena was built, newcomers to the area should have expected noise and other conditions which have given rise to complaint.

The suit, filed by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Green and others, said the ball games attract persons who displayed a "reckless disregard for private property and privacy."

Md. Race Date Talks Next Week

Baltimore, Jan. 21 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission announced today it does not expect to take up before next week the possibility of changing the spring racing dates assigned to Havre de Grace.

Milton A. Reckord, track president, said last week he probably would ask the commission for new dates to avoid competition with Garden State in Camden, N. J. The New Jersey meeting, April 15-May 31, would conflict directly with Havre de Grace's split session, April 14-May 1 and May 17-27.

His horses were frequent entries in the Hambletonian trotting classic at Goshen, N. Y., and in 1939 he drove his own entry, Leemite, in that race.

The local team was trailing, 28-31, going into the final event, a 200-yard sprint relay. Mount St. Joe's anchor man reached the finish mark about a body-length in front of the St. John's swimmer. The time was 1:49.9. It was the first loss in four meets this season.

Beirut, Lebanon, Jan. 21 (AP).—Lebanon, the only Arab state entered in the winter Olympic games at St. Moritz, Switzerland, January 30-February 8, will withdraw if a iZonist flag is displayed along with standards of other competing nations, it was announced here today.

It was reported that the Lebanese government received a note from its legation in Switzerland saying that a Zionist club representing the Zionist state in Palestione requested that the Zionist flag be flown.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 21 (AP).—Eina Anderson will celebrate her tenth anniversary as a long-distance swimmer this year by making her fourth and last attempt to swim the English Channel at the age of 38.

The Danish swimmer's attempt, scheduled in early August during the Olympic games in London, will be made from England to France—a direction opposite to that negotiated by successful channel swimmers in the past.

Philadelphia, Jan. 21 (AP).—Bag containing $21,973 worth of jewelry was lost eight months ago by Mrs. George W. Abell, former wife of one-time Republican National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, police reported today.

They said the loss was revealed in an appeal from W. E. Miller and Son, Philadelphia insurance adjusters, who reported the missing jewels included an $8400 bracelet and a $2000 platinum charm bracelet bearing charms which were gifts from the Duke of Windsor, the Duke of Kent, and the former Doris Duke Cromwell.

Truman Trying 'To Find a Man' For CAB Position

President Truman said yesterday "the pay didn't enter into the question at all" when he asked Congress to let Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter serve as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board but keep his military pay and rank.

The President made that statement in a letter to Chairman Gurney (R., S. D.) of the Senate armed services committee. That group twice turned down legislation to meet Mr. Truman's request—the second time after he had called the members to the White House for a personal talk.

Presidential Secretary Charles Ross told reporters that Mr. Truman now has no other course than to "try to find a man to fill the job." He added that Mr. Truman "has not had very good luck up to now."

The President's letter replied to one from Gurney telling him what the committee had done. Gurney wrote that "the committee . . . asked me to advise you that they do not favor the practice of using special legislation as a means of avoiding statutory wage limitations."

The CAB chairmanship pays $10,000 a year. As a major general in the air force, Kuter's pay and allowances add up to a little over $15,000.

Scientists Find 'Oldest Ancestor' Of Alphabets

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—An American scientific expedition claimed today to have discovered readable examples of the oldest ancestor of the European and Semitic alphabets.

They were inscriptions left by ancientminers in a turquoise mine in the biblical Mount Sinai area. The mine was last operated between the eleventh and twelfth centuries before Christ and the inscription were believed to be at least 300 years older.

Prof. W. F. Albright of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore Md., who announced the find said the alphabet contained about 28 consonants and no vowels. Modern Arabic has no written vowels.

2 Plead Innocent To Bribe Charges At Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—Jockey Patrick F. Connolly of Charles Town and Peter del Pozzo of New York and Baltimore pleaded innocent in the Jefferson County circuit court today on charges of attempting to bribe another jockey in a horse race here December 18, 1945.

Connolly and del Pozzo were originally indicted last fall, but new indictments which the State said would strengthen its case were returned by a grand jury yesterday. No date was set for their trial.

The two men are charged with offering $200 to Jockey Webster Snyder to pull his horse in the race. The offer was refused, and Snyder's mount won.

Hospital Physicians Cleared in Baby Death

Minneapolis, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Physicians at city-owned General Hospital were absolved tonight of any blame in the death of a 4-month-old boy who died on the mayor's desk while his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jensen, were waiting to protest the hospital's refusal to admit the sick child.

The Board of Public Welfare voted unanimously to clear the physicians after a 90-minute public hearing at which the baby's mother tearfully reported that she had pleaded for three hours for permission to leave the baby at the hospital overnight for treatment.

GUARANTEED BY MONTGOMERY AND PRINCE GEORGES COUNTIES.

Sealed proposals will be received until 3 o'clock p. m., Eastern Standard Time, on Wednesday, February 4, 1948, by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at its office, 4017 Hamilton Street, Hyattsville, Md., for the following bonds of the Washington Suburban Sanitary District, dated February 1, 1948, maturing February 1 in the years hereinafter stated, without option of prior payment:

$3,000,000—Series "QQQ" bonds, maturing annually $75,000 1949 to 1988, both inclusive, to be issued under the authority of Chapter 122 of the Acts of 1918 of the General Assembly of Maryland, as amended, for water main and sewer construction.

There will be no auction. Bonds will be delivered about March 1, 1948, at place of purchaser's choice.

The Series "QQQ" bonds will be awarded at the highest price, not less than par and accrued interest, offered for the lowest interest rate bid upon, not exceeding 4% per annum, in a multiple of 1/10 or 1/8 of 1%, and no bid may name more than one rate for the bonds of this issue.

28% Tobacco Cut Unlikely to Change

Federal Officials Say Export Outlook Even Darker Today

By The Associated Press

Department of Agriculture officials gave tobacco-State Congressmen little hope yesterday of changing its order for a 28 per cent reduction in flue-cured tobacco plainting acreage this year.

Charles Gage, director of the department's tobacco section, told the Congressmen at a conference, "The picture of exports on a cash basis (dollar exchange by countries) is darker today than it was in November when the announcement of the reduction from the 1947 acreage was made."

He said the department's tobacco experts fear exports may fall below the 370 million pounds which they had estimated would move out of this country from July 1, 1947, to June 30, 1948. This does not include any shipments under foreign aid.

Consideration must be given also to the fact, he said, that the support program law expires at the end of the selling of the 1948 crop.

Gage said the exports would not touch the surplus tobacco now held under the support program by the Commodity Credit Corp., which allows the Government to take the tobacco from farmers on loan if they do not feel they're getting a fair price as determined by the Government.

Federal specialists predicted the 1948 crop will amount to approximately one billion pounds, about 700 million of this to go to domestic consumption.

They said they had given consideratio nto foreign aid program possibilities in the export situation before making the 28 per cent reduction from the 1947 planting.

Two Montgomery Countians Give Md. Fowl Refuge Area

Baltimore, Jan. 21 (AP).—A 40-acre tract of land along the Potomac River and on a route taken by gray mallards on their southward migrations toward Chesapeake Bay has been donated to the State as a wild waterfowl sanctuary, it was announced today.

State Game Warden Ernest A. Vaughn said the property was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Bidwell Dierssen of Travilah, Montgomery County, long active in conservation work.

The property is between the Potomac and the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, adjacent to National Park Service holdings.

Vaughn said development of the area would be completed by September by the State Game and Inland Fish Commission in cooperation with Federal agencies and other wildlife groups.

50 Va. Legislators Indorse Tobacco Plan

Richmond, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—About 50 Virginia lawmakers from tobacco-growing counties today indorsed a bill creating a Virginia bright flue-cured tobacco commission, imposing at a tax on tobacco growers to support it and providing a means whereby Virginia growers may cooperate with Tobacco Associates, Inc.

Tobacco Associates, formed to stimulate the export of the bright leaf after Great Britain withdrew ready is functioning in North and from the American market, al-South Carolina with prospects of eventual support in Georgia.

At the same meeting, the State Legislators heard former United States Representative Thomas G. Burch of Martinsville, warn against overly anxious efforts to restore a 28-per-cent acreage cut recently imposed by the Department of Agriculture.

Maryland Ousts Two Families Needing Care

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 21.—Two families were "escorted" back to West Virginia by deputies today, after a Washington County official advised that they be "left on the doorsteps of welfare boards over there."

The families were sent back on the advice of an attorney to the county Board of Commissioners, after Sheriff Joseph D. Baker complained to the commissioners that destitute families, migrating from West Virginia, were creating a problem. One of the families was returned to Clarksburg and the other was sent to Martinsburg.

One of the families, which came here about six months ago, has been lodged in the county jail for several weeks since its eviction from a farmhouse near Hagerstown.

Charles Wagaman, attorney to the commissioners, told the board unless they returned migrants to their home States they would have "a thousand of them in Washington County to take care of."

In Cumberland

2 Detectives Are Cleared In Assault

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 21 (AP).—Two Newark, N. J., detectives were acquitted by a trial magistrate today of assault and battery charges filed against them after they questioned five persons arrested here last week in the attempted holdup of a local super-market.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, jr., said he was releasing Robert Donnelly and Robert Griffith, the Newark officers, because Cumberland "will become a dumping ground for criminals if detectives who come here to help are prosecuted under these conditions."

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris introduced in evidence a small leather glove filled with shot and fitting over the knuckles. He contended it belonged to one of the Newark officers and was used during questioning of four Newark men and a girl picked up in nearby West Virginia after the attempted holdup.

Chief R. Emmett Flynn of the Cumberland Police Department announced after the questioning last Friday night that at least two of those in custody here had admitted participating in five armed holdups which netted about $4300 in and around Newark.

Rakes Grilling In Bank Case Completed

Richmond, Va., Jan. 21 (AP).—The cross examination of Hugh N. Rakes ended in Federal District Court here today and United States Attorney George R. Humrickhouse said he would call a former FBI agent to the stand to refute the defendant's testimony.

Both Humrickhouse and Defense Counsel R. H. McNeill rested their cases earlier in the week in the trial of Rakes and his wife, Mrs. Lillian C. Rakes, on charges of aiding William Reeves Gardner in the misapplication of more than $435,000 from the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg.

Under cross examination Rakes declared he had listed all property he owned in a bankruptcy petition and did not omit a $1000 debt due him as Humrickhouse charged.

Rakes testified later that he had been assured by Gardner that all his obligations had been met from proceeds of a one-million-dollar loan obtained from the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. The dairyman said that despite this assurance, a $31,000 note was later produced and brought to him fer settlement.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 21 (AP).—Three Annapolis attorneys have been recommended to Governor Lane as possible appointees for the Fifth Circuit judgeship to be vacated by Judge William J. McWilliams March 1.

Listed by the Anne Arundel County Bar Association were State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson; Benjamin Michaelson, county solicitor, and Noah A. Hillman, prominent Republican.

Recommendations for the same post will be made by the State Bar Association at a meeting Friday at Baltimore.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Timing of 6th St. Traffic Lights Explained by Keneipp

A Silver Spring reader recently sent me a stirring denunciation of traffic conditions on 6th st. nw., so I thought I'd do some checking.

The lady contended that prior to being widened, 6th st. carried traffic efficiently. But now that it's a wider two-way street, it doesn't. And what's more, the traffic lights aren't synchronized.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp answers that there are many good reasons for the change. To begin with, 6th st. is now U. S. Route 1, and couldn't remain one way unless an alternate (and suitable) street were available to carry traffic in the opposite direction.

What's more, the safety islands in the middle of 6th st. form a hazard on a one-way street because they are in the path of traffic weaving from lane to lane. But on a two-way street that hazard doesn't exist, because vehicles are supposed to keep to the right of the islands at all times.

District Liner Keneipp says: "The advantage of widening the street to 56 feet would be lost if we'd keep it one way. As it is, we can very easily handle two lanes of traffic in each direction, and possibly more."

On the subject of synchronizing the lights (one of my pet peeves) the traffic director says:

"Unless you're moving in an opposite direction to the main flow of rush hour traffic, you'll find 6th st. one of the best regulated in the city.

"We use a 'triple-offset' system there, as we do on such thoroughfares as 16th st.

"This means that we have one light cycle for normal traffic periods, another (favoring southbound traffic) during the morning rush hour, and a third (favoring northbound traffic) during the evening rush.

"Except for vehicles moving against the main flow, the lights are synchronized for a steady 25 miles per hour.

"However, here's a word of caution. Be sure your speedometer is accurate. A local testing agency informs me that between 80 and 90 per cent of the speedometers it checks are found to be defective.

"I had my own tested recently, and found that it had a margin of error of more than 20 per cent."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Marjorie L. Duff of Charles Town, W. Va., spotted this classified ad in her favorite newspaper:

ADD SIGNS

Elizabeth G. Link of 163 Wesmond dr., Alexandria, Va., says that this sign is posted in a Middleburg (Va.) store:

"Our credit manager is on an extended vacation. Please help us pay his expenses by paying cash."

That reminds me of the old gag about the firm whose policy was: "Credit extended only to cash customers."

PERSONAL NOTES

Pfc. Kerby M. Spicer, jr., Second Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N. C.: "A" loses his bet; "B" wins. Congress has taken no action to restore the vote to the District, but proponents of suffrage here are hoping for legislation during this session.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

C. S. Trimble of 1443 Holly st. nw. wonders why the sports department didn't follow up on the amazing news contained in the dispatch:

"The Cincinnati Reds tonight announced the receipt of signed contracts for the 1948 season from Pitcher Ken Raffensberger and Outfielder Mary Rickert."

Wonder if Mary will wear her uniform pants below the knees for afternoon games, and down to the ankles when they play under lights.

IRISH OATMEAL

From time to time housewives have wondered why their oatmeal turned out green. The Alcoa Aluminum people say they've found the answer.

If you use iodized salt and don't stir it thoroughly into your oatmeal, the finished product will look like the top of a pool table.

But if you stir well (or use regular salt) you'll get normal results.

Don't ask me why—that's as far as I care to get involved in the subject, because I have now told you everything I know about cooking.

ADD NAMES

Mrs. Robert L. Bilyard of Sterling, Va., wonders why we haven't mentioned Halfway, from her own State, or these two from Iowa: Lost Nation and What Cheer.

Senate May Probe Thomas Deals

By Drew Pearson

Oklahoma's Senator Elmer Thomas, who finally admitted trading on the commodity market, may get a full-fledged investigation from his own colleagues.

Sen. Ferguson

Thomas told his side of the speculating story in a slushy letter, full of self-righteous alibis, which he sent to Senator Ferguson's investigating subcommittee.

The subcommittee was called together for a very hush-hush meeting in Ferguson's private office. Ferguson read the letter to other members, impatiently shorted that the committee had better supplement the information with specific questions about Senator Thomas' speculations. A letter was then fired back bluntly asking Thomas for names and dates of all commodities purchased.

However, Washington observers are still keeping their fingers crossed as to whether the Senators really will probe another member of "the club." After all, Senator Ferguson pulled his punches when serious charges were brought against his GOP colleague, Brewster of Maine.

GOP Goes Into Movie Business

Memories of Hollywood are still lingering from last year's razzle-dazzle before the Un-American Affairs Committee. As a result, GOP Senators are now planning to make movies of their own—complete with Hollywood stars and animated cartoons. They plan to produce 25 political films before November, glorifying the accomplishments of the Eightieth Congress.

The movie idea was given the rousing approval of Senate Republicans the other day at a secret luncheon-caucus, which touched off the 1948 senatorial campaign. First movie will go into production tentatively May 1.

Actors George Murphy, Robert Montgomery and Adolphe Menjou were mentioned as loyal Republicans who could be called upon to help with the project. But the main actors will be men such as Bob Taft and Arthur Vandenberg, who played the heavy roles in Congress. They will be shown in action on the screen, occasionally in glamorous technicolor. Cartoon characters also will be used, scrambling over charts and graphs and gaily pointing out favorable statistics.

Spadework for the project was done by three Senate secretaries—Charles Egenroad (secretary to Senator Capehart of Indiana), Art Burgess (Senator Cain of Washington) and Charles Kapik (Senator Martin of Pennsylvania).

Egenroad told Senators at the private luncheon that the movies would cost approximately $50,000.

"Do you think that will be enough" broke in New Jersey's Senator Albert Hawkes, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce. He suggested $100,000 as a more likely figure.

Senator Arthur Watkins of Utah wanted to be sure the movies would not be used to campaign in the primaries, and Senator Joe Ball of Minnesota asked how the Democrats were going to be dragged in to see the pictures.

"What good will it do just to show them to Republicans?" he asked.

"Senator, if you announce there is going to be a show, it will bring out more Republicans," Burgess spoke up. "Then when election day comes along, maybe some of those Republicans who would rather play golf will come out and vote instead."

Note—Smitten with the same movie bug, the Democratic Party is quietly buying up 16-mm. movie projectors to show political films. Economy-minded Republicans are not buying any projectors, plan to ask each county chairman to borrow a projector instead.

Czar Petrillo Unbends

Music Czar James Petrillo has hinted to the House Labor Committee that he might be willing to call off his ban on recordings if the Taft-Hartley Law is altered. He has asked for changes in the law in order to stretch the union's welfare fund to the full 200,000 membership.

As the law now stands, only the 32,500 musicians who do live broadcasting and recording are eligible for welfare benefits.

Petrillo made his proposal to Acting Chairman Gerald Landis of Indiana, indicated he would be willing to enter negotiations to change his ban on recordings if the law could be revised. Landis consulted two of his colleagues on the committee, Congressmen Charles Kersten of Wisconsin and Richard Nixon of California, who said they would not object to considering a Taft-Hartley revision.

Merry-go-Round

United States Ambassador to Poland Stanton Griffis has told General Marshall he's already bored with Poland, wants a new diplomatic post. When Marshall asked advisers where Griffis should be sent, one replied: "There are only two posts open, Paris and Palm Beach. I'm for sending him back to Palm Beach."

Secretary of State Marshall has given up hope of getting the Marshall Plan in operation by May 1. His new date is June 15.

The White House is afraid Henry Wallace will use the compulsory-draft issue to give Truman an awful licking.
